that no member of this neo-Roosevelt generation ever heard of an evangelist-singer team. The good ones carried advance agents, who traveled at least a month ahead of the stars. They would come into town and hold a conference with the better people at which enough money would be laid on the line to build what was then known as a tabernacle.

The tabernacle was built usually of rough boards, donated preferably by a leading building materials dealer. The dirt floor would be sprinkled to a depth of say six inches with sawdust. Hence the term "sawdust trail." It would be provided with a stage and furnished with hard benches without backs.

There would be enough round-bellied coal stoves to raise the interior temperature well above the sweating point. The better people having thus done their part, everything was all set to go after the unregenerates.

THE objective was to bring the unregenerates to the mourner's bench. As the days passed and the sinners were conquered one by one, interest in the gayer dogs who held out to the last waxed and swelled. Around the stove in the grocery store, such talk as this would be rife:

"You reckon Barret's going to git old Hank tonight? Looks to me he's gittin' shaky."

"No-o-o-o," someone would put in judiciously, "Hank ain't goin' to cave in before Saturday night. You-all knows Hank never comes down to the bench till he's good and sure he's done had all the glory that's coming to him."

And so it would go until the wicked had been made to see the error of their ways and the community had been fortified to face the trials and perils of another year.

BARRETT was a great practical joker. One day he brought to the boarding house where he dwelt with the unattached young blades and the good-looking school teachers of the town a trick gadget shaped much like a 30-30 cartridge and bearing a little knob at the side. There was a peep-hole at the top and when invited to look through it you saw a picture in silhouette. The idea was to urge the victim to turn the knob and bring the other pictures into view. When he complied, a tiny stream of water squirted into his eye and everybody laughed uproariously.

Barrett had been caught at the drugstore down town, and had promptly bought one to work the gag on somebody else. Unwisely, he neglected to look through the peephole himself.

At the boarding house table, he sat next to the high school principal, a young woman even severer in disposition than her exacting responsibilities actually required. Barrett was no more than settled in his chair when he produced his new possession and invited Miss Siefert to have a look. She looked and having looked she flushed an angry red, and when Barrett invited her to twist the knob she froze him with a stare. "No thank you," she said icily.

It developed when the uncomfortable meal was concluded and the male boarders held a hasty court of inquiry that the picture was a baddie. It wasn't exactly obscene, but even among advanced liberals it would have been a trifle off color. And Miss Siefert wasn't an advanced liberal. She leaned a good 45 degrees in the other direction.

THAT finished Barrett and the boarding house. Although the food there was by long odds the best in town, he never came back.

LICKING INFLATION

By CHARLES V. STANTON

If our national leaders who are making a political play of the method to be employed in tax reduction were working for the welfare of taxpayers instead of maneuvering for votes in the year's elections, solution of the problem would be easy. It would be necessary only to remove the withholding system for collection and require wage and salary earners to pay their taxes directly and individually. The resultant hue and cry would quickly bring the tax rate tumbling down much farther than anyone has dared suggest to date.

The withholding tax has most definitely contributed to the inflationary trend, and will continue to do so as long as it remains in effect. Imposition by the state of a one per cent withholding for state income taxes is another step along the path to inflation.

When withholding taxes went into effect, pressure immediately was exerted upon the employer for "take home" pay equal to what the worker had received prior to tax withholding. The employer, in turn, added the tax cost to charges for his product or services. As prices advanced, workers were required to seek more pay, which added to the rate of tax withholding, and made a double addition to the next boost in prices. And so the spiral has gone and continues to go.

The withholding tax system, in operation, forces the employer to pay his employes' taxes. While, in theory, he is deducting the tax from wages and salaries, he actually keeps "take home" pay the same as before and adds the tax cost to the price of his product or service. Deductions probably will be made from salaries and wages for a short time under provisions of the state law, but it is a certainty that the one per cent withholding will be included in all new wage demands and, within a few months, the load will be back on the employer, who must either raise prices or cut profits, and few will choose the latter alternative.

Added to the burden upon the employer is the cost of accounting. The bookkeeping problem, which now includes both federal and state withholding taxes, coupled with social security, industrial accident, corporation and business taxes, excise taxes, unemployment compensation and other reports, adds materially to the overhead cost of any corporation or business. Businesses operating trucks or service vehicles have recently assumed another headache in accounting to the state public utilities commission under new regulations of the state transportation code. These costs, of course, are reflected in higher prices, adding to the cost of living and forcing new wage demands which start the cycle all over again.

If we would get off the road to inflation and bring about needed tax reforms, the quickest way would be to outlaw withholding taxes.

The withholding tax is a fine political weapon. Everyone is ready to sock business. The idea of whittling profits has a universal appeal. "Soak the Rich" is a sure-fire political slogan.

But the facts are that the rich simply get richer by boosting the profit margin with every increase in price, and the consumer gets it in the neck after all.

As long as the employer keeps the books and pays the tax, the average wage and salary earner gives little attention to the income taxes going to the state or federal government. He demands, and gets, his "take home" pay and lets the boss worry about taxes. But if the money was paid to him in person and he was then forced to turn over Uncle Sam's share personally, it would be a far different story. The yell for tax reductions would shake Washington to its foundations.

But we are not foolish enough to expect abolishment of the withholding tax. The method greatly increases tax income, both through inflationary effects as well as limiting evasion. The matter of convenience to the state and federal tax agencies also is a factor. Furthermore, the withholding system enables government agencies to keep a high rate of taxation without too much protest. The business man and industrialist may object, but he is a member of a very small minority group and, besides, the public is always glad to see him take a beating.

So, politicians will continue kicking the tax reduction political football around as each party strives to gain votes thereby, and the obvious solution of inflationary and tax problems will not even be mentioned.

Indian Loopers Win 2nd Straight Over Reedsport

By AL WELLS

Coach Newby's Indians of the RHS basketball team made it two wins in a row over Reedsport Saturday when they marked up a score of 59 to 35 against the Braves.

Roseburg took the lead at the first when Blancks first shot circled the inside rim of the basket and rolled out, only to be recovered by Hubbard. In addition to his always-good defensive playing, Blancks showed well at offensive work.

The Indians maintained a comfortable lead all through the game, managing a 14-to-9 first quarter score and a 26-to-15 half-time score. The third period score was 43 to 22.

Piper took high scoring honors with 13 points to his credit. Roseburg's Hubbard and Pinion of Reedsport each accounted for 11.

Each of the 10 Roseburg players saw action in both halves of the game.

Next week the Indians meet Coos Bay, "the team to beat." If the improvement of Roseburg's team since the first of the season means anything, the Coos boys will have trouble coming their way Jan. 30.

Coach Erickson's Junior varsity team downed the Oakland's varsity squad 45 to 24 in the preliminary Saturday. The tilt was close in the first stages, with the score once 4 to 0, for Oakland. The Oaklanders were ahead only in the first quarter.

Roseburg's varsity team sank 7 out of 17 free throws, Reedsport 5 out of 16.

Basketball Tourney for Grade Schools Scheduled

The dates for the Douglas county Grade School basketball tournament at Oakland are set at Feb. 26, 27 and 28, and Mar. 5 and 6. Sup't of Schools M. L. Gilbreath reports.

The winner of the Douglas county championship at Oakland will automatically be entered in the State Grade School tournament to be held at Hill Military Academy at Portland on Mar. 11, 12, and 13 of this year.

Official diplomas will be issued to each of the ten boys who are selected for the all-county team, picked by coaches and officials of the tournament.

Huskies Defeat Oregon to Regain Conference Lead

SEATTLE, Jan. 26.—(AP)—Back in the Northern Division Pacific Coast Conference basketball lead, the University of Washington Huskies swing into Oregon this weekend to open season festivities with the challenging Oregon States Beavers at Corvallis.

Defending division and conference titlists, the Beavers were idle over the weekend and fell a half game behind th Huskies, who swept a pair from the Oregon Ducks on the Seattle floor.

Washington ranks as a slight favorite, despite the Staters home floor advantage, largely on the basis of its three-for-four mark against Oregon. The Ducks had nipped the State College Beavers in their only meeting.

Washington State, which swept a rough pair from Idaho to climb from the cellar to third place, tackles the Idahoans again Saturday night at Pullman.

Both of the last Saturday windup clashes ranked in the rough class—WSC and Idaho setting a new Northern Division record with 69 infractions, and two players—Washington's Don Millikan and Oregon's Bob Lavey—being thumbed out of the Husky-Duck fray for over-enthusiasm.

Washington clipped Oregon 56-39 and Washington State humbled Idaho 58-34 in the Saturday contests.

Outstanding center play dominated both contests. Washington's Jack Nichols tallied 23 points to run his conference scoring to 105 points in six games while checking Ron Wiley to four points. Idaho challenged the Cougars only so long as it had the 6-foot, 9-inch Jack Phoenix. The Vandals trailed only 22-18 when Phoenix was thumbed out early in the second half. In five minutes WSC whipped the count to 37-25 and it was all over. Vince Hanson, the nation's leading collegiate scorer two seasons back, led the Cougars with 15 points.

Oregon Anglers Win Battle For Multiple Spinner

PORTLAND, Jan. 26—(AP)—The 1948 angling regulations for Oregon have been adopted by the State Game Commission with sporsmen winning their demand for multiple spinner and double hooked plug lures.

Petitions asking the commission to revise the tentative rules, which banned the multitple spinner lure, were filed by sports goods dealers who said the rule was unnecessary when catch limits are imposed.

The trout season will run Ma 1 to Sept. 30 except on coastal streams, where the season is May 1-Oct. 31 above tidewater and June 15-Oct. 21 in tidewater. The minimum length will be eight inches in coastal waters, six inches elsewhere.

Salmon and steelhead over 20 inches may be taken the year around with these exceptions: Coastal streams and tributaries of the Columbia River below St. Helens where streams will be closed March 1-Sept. 15; Miami River closed in November. The bag limit will be two a day or four in seven days or in possession with not more than 20 during the year.

Jack salmon bag limit, which had no limit last year, will be ten in a day and not more than 20 in possession. During the trout season, however, the bag for jack salmon is to be counted as part of the trout limit.

Steelhead fishing in the Willamette and its tributaries above Oregon City is banned during the winter months, except in the Santiam River and north and south forks of that stream.

Most of the Cascade Lakes will be open with the general trout season, except a number to open June 15 through Sept. 15. They are East, Paulina, Diamond, Big, Clear, Pamelia, Ann, Marion, Moose and Gordon.

The closure of certain coastal tributaries put in effect last year will continue. Action on the Leaburg dam was postponed until a February session.

Jews Blast Arab Bus in New Clash

JERUSALEM, Jan. 26.—(AP)—Officials said three persons were injured today when two mines blasted an Arab bus outside Bethlehem. Jewish sources said 12 Arabs were injured—one fatally—when Jews fired on the bus, which was overturned by the explosions.

In Haifa, Sixth Airborne troops found "a large quantity of ammunition" in a house in the Arab quarter, officials said. They said 23 Arabs were arrested.

Outside Jerusalem 300 Arabs battled Jewish convoy guards yesterday until British armored cars broke up the skirmish. At least 10 Jews and two Arabs were reported killed.

Arab sources said the fight began when Jewish advance convoy guards encountered Arabs mining the section of highway which cuts through the Judean hills.

Police said of the 25 Jewish guards involved, four were killed, 10 were missing and three were wounded.

Unofficial figures show 980 persons have lost their lives since the United Nations voted Nov. 29 to partition the Holy Land.

Lynam, Weaver Win Bouts; 'Gator Supplies Thrills

Two man vs. man wrestling bouts and a man vs. alligator tussle comprised the weekly wrestling program that jammed the Roseburg Armory Saturday night with a throng of nearly 1,200. The two regular wrestling matches went three falls each. In the first one, Joe Lynam triumphed over Georges Dusette; in the second, Buck Weaver won over Joe Dorsetti.

The alligator, a six-foot 300-pound specimen, furnished some brief, impromptu excitement by starting to crawl off the mat under an opening in the wire screen enclosing the ring. Screams and laughter mingled as spectators hastily scrambled out of the danger zone, while the trainer, Tuffy Truesdell, tugged at the tail and one leg of the saurian until he got it back where it belonged. Truesdell's exhibition with the 'gator consisted of a nerve-tingling flirtation with its lethal jaws and a wrestling bout, in which he turned the saurian on its back. The act was opened with a brief lecture on the physical structure and habits of alligators generally.

Wrestling Results

Dusette got the first fall of his battle with Lynam, applying a full-nelson in 13:34. Lynam took the second fall with an abdominal stretch in 8:16, and the third and deciding one with a jack-knife upset in 5:35.

Weaver was a victor on two falls with his unbreakable combination of a backward flip and neck twister. Dorsetti got the second fall of the argument with a hangman hold—his chief weapon—in 6:27. He had the same type of hold clamped on Weaver in the final round, for an apparent victory, when Weaver did the supposedly impossible by twisting loose and then quickly flattening Dorsetti with the backward flip. The time was 6:03. First fall of the bout lasted 13:30.

During an intermission, a group of Boy Scots collected a sizable sum from the spectators for the March of Dimes.

Beau Jack Winner When He Break's Bratton's Jaw

CHICAGO, Jan. 24. — (AP) — Johnny "Honeyboy" Bratton had his jaw taped up today with a possible fracture after losing on a technical knockout to Beau Jack, former world's lightweight champion, last night.

Beau Jack won on a TKO in the eighth round of a savagely fought battle in Chicago Stadium after the 20-year-old Chicago boxer appealed to Referee Johnny Behr to stop the bout because of a terrific blow to his jaw.

Beau Jack registered his fifth straight triumph since returning to the ring after a fractured knee cap had shelved him.

Glendale Loopers Win In Final 25 Seconds

Glendale High School's basketball team managed a 35-to-34 win over Myrtle Creek's "B" squad at Myrtle Creek Friday. Myrtle Creek led all the way until the last 25 seconds when Glendale scored the winning basket. A last-second toss by Christian of Myrtle Creek narrowly missed.

The visitors from Glendale didn't fair quite as well in volleyball, as the girls team lost to the Myrtle Creek hosts, 32 to 21 in a preliminary to the basketball game.
