EISENHOWER, retiring as chief of staff of the U. S. army, says in Washington that if war comes to America again the FIRST 60 DAYS WILL DECIDE THE WINNER.

Because major nations, in the future, will be armed with weapons of terrifying destructive power, a series of lightning blows might conceivably end a future war at its outset.

HE means atom weapons, of course. What he is saying is that in atom-bomb warfare whoever gets there fastest with the mostest will win.

We got the jump on atom-bomb development. It is a safe assumption that we have (at present) the "mostest" bombs. If we're even half sensible, we'll see to it that we keep enough planes of superior speed and range to get there "fastest" with our bombs if shooting trouble starts.

IT'S a grim thought. Here is perhaps a faintly consoling thought: A generation ago, poison gas warfare was a grisly probability. But EVERYBODY got poison gas.

IF ANYBODY started it, the prospect was certain that somebody else would come right back with it.

In the last war, nobody used gas.

THE same thing might happen with atom bombs IF WE KEEP THE JUMP ON THE REST OF THE WORLD.

We aren't going to use 'em, unless somebody starts something. In time, as hot tempers cool, nobody might use 'em.

CONGRESS, eyeing the possibility that the peak of prices has been reached and maybe passed, is toying with the idea of extending rent control a month at a time until we can see where we're headed.

It is seldom enough that Harry Bridges and congress agree, but a San Francisco dispatch this morning tells us that Bridges and his CIO longshoremen "may discard their traditional one-year policy and seek a LONG-TERM work agreement."

Bridges, you see, is also toying with the thought that the peak may be past.

LETTERS to the Editor

Comments Editorial. On Manufacturing. SALEM—While I am sure that I don't agree with you 100 per cent in all things, I find little in your editorials which does not click with me.

Concentrations on your splendid editorial "Getting Full Value" in the January 23 issue of the Review. It would be most enlightening to a majority of the people in the state if they knew of the many plants in Oregon which were manufacturing little known items from stock which is being burned in others.

Conservation does not mean the prohibition of use but wise use.

If the people of Oregon could be taken editorially through some of the manufacturing plants such as Kinzua, Hansett Handle Co. at Tillamook, Chapman Mfg. Co. at Corvallis, Evans Products Co. at Coos Bay and many others who are striving for more complete utilization at point of severance, it might give them some ideas.

IT'S HERE AT LAST

By CHARLES V. STANTON

It's almost like Christmas around the News-Review plant... excitement, expectancy, suspense, prying into packages, peeking at labels. The reason is that our new press has started to arrive. The first car has been unloaded and the second is close behind. Within a few more days, we hope, the job of erection will start.

During the war we were faced with serious manpower problems. It was impossible to fully staff any department. Then we had a most critical paper shortage, a condition not yet entirely relieved, although substantially improved.

Once our new press is installed and in operation, we will be in a position to grant more requests for advertising space, to accept an unlimited number of new subscribers for our circulation lists, and to print as many pages daily as conditions may warrant, rather than being definitely restricted by equipment limitations.

It was not lack of vision and foresight that kept us from beating the equipment limitations earlier. Our order for the new press was placed with the factory approximately two years ago, and we were informed we probably would be able to install the machine within a year.

Aside from the fact that we will be able to give better service, the thing that pleases us most about procurement of the new press is that we can once again go out and invite in new subscribers. Had anyone told us 10 years ago we would see the time when, as a newspaperman, we would be rejecting advertising and circulation, we would have branded him as a candidate for the nearest nut house.

If the time comes when we can't feel pride in the paper with which we are employed and feel that we have nothing to offer readers and advertisers in the way of service, then we'll get into some other occupation in a hurry. Our pride, however, has suffered in the past few years, because we knew we could improve our service if we could only eliminate bottlenecks.

We have made extensive plans which will go into effect gradually rather than all at once. We hope that within a few months our rapidly growing family of readers will find the News-Review a larger and better newspaper than at present. It will take time to make our readjustments, but we will have improved equipment with which to work, and while there may be a good many rough spots as we alter our processes and enlarge our various departments, we believe the changes will be pleasing to our many subscribers and advertisers and that we will be better able to serve our community.

We've been anticipating the arrival of the new press for many months and now that we can see it taking shape, and know that in a few more weeks it will be ready to go, we feel much as we did when, as a small boy, we waited for the single-shot .22 rifle we knew was coming at Christmas time... kinda goose-pimply.

TREE KILLS CHILD

COER D. ALENE, Idaho, Feb. 19—(AP)—A two-year-old child asleep in her crib was killed yesterday when a tall pine tree, uprooted by wind, crashed onto a cabin.

The child was Janice Layonne Wing, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Wing. Two older sisters, sleeping in another room, were not hurt.

How To Take On Weight During Food Cost Slash

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK—(AP)—One theory of history holds that emergencies produce the heroes to meet them. Thus a muddy street in England created the legendary deed of courtesy—Walter Raleigh spreading his cloak before the dainty feet of Queen Elizabeth.

Walt acted quickly and coolly to meet this emergency, but just his head later in another case. From the Crimean war came Florence Nightingale and the development of modern nursing. From the ruins of the 1919 baseball scandal rose a new figure—big Babe Ruth, who helped rescue the national pastime.

Holland was reported saved again by a small boy who plugged a hole in the dike with his thumb. History is full of such examples.

New Heroine Arises. Out in Chicago the present emergency—the high cost of living—may have produced a new Joan of Arc for budget-bothered housewives.

This lady is 22-year-old Mrs. Ruth Berbes, who last week launched a one-woman drive against the present price by going on a "high cost of living fast." Her passive rebellion began after she was charged 26 cents for a quarter pound of butter.

Mrs. Berbes immediately went on a diet consisting of five slices of bread a day and two glasses of milk. In the first few days she lost three pounds, she said other housewives were taking up the idea.

Her program holds many interesting possibilities. If it becomes popular American women will have to put even more padding in their clothing to retain the "new look" and that will probably cost more money than they saved by dieting.

Stingy bachelors will benefit most. They will show up at their girls' houses with a loaf of bread and a bottle of milk and say:

"Let's stay home and enjoy a nice meal at home, honey. We'll fight this 'inflation' together."

Personally I think Mrs. Berbes is overlooking an even better way to reduce her grocery bills. She works at a drugstore soda fountain. I did this for two years during high school and found my worries about food costs were at an end.

Personal Experience. When I took the job I weighed an anemic 135 pounds and could hardly muscle up a gallon jug of chocolate syrup. Technically we were supposed to pay for any delicacies we consumed. But with me the public was the first. From time to time I found it necessary to taste a spoon full of ice cream to see that its flavor and consistency were proper for the customers. I also regularly checked the marshmallow, the fudge sauce and the crushed pineapple.

After two years the store manager found that my wholehearted devotion to the public welfare was costing him about one gallon of ice cream out of every five. So he moved me over to the tobacco counter.

But I had gained 25 pounds. I hadn't bought any meals for months, and had money in the bank to start college.

It just takes initiative to whip inflation.

Bob Frank Sells Ranch To Woods Plant Manager

Sale of R. H. (Bob) Frank's home and 80-acre ranch at Sylmon Valley, on the Melrose road, to A. I. Hills, recently appointed manager of the St. Helens Wood Products Co. here, was announced this week.

Hills is moving his family and thoroughbred Arabian horses here from St. Helens. Franks, Roseburg grocer, has moved to his new home at the former Hugh English place on the North Umpqua river near Gile.

Hills will manage the St. Helens Wood Products Co. broom handle factory, which will start operations soon in the former Paulus Brothers cannery on Winchester St.

The transaction was handled through Earl and Gladys Wiley, realtors.

Fine Paid, Weapons Taken On Concealment Charge

Francis L. Kenney, Roseburg, paid a $10 fine in Justice Court Wednesday on the charge of carrying concealed weapons within a motor vehicle. Justice of the Peace Thomas C. Hartfield reported Kenney's gun and knife were confiscated and sent to state police headquarters at Salem, Hartfield said.

Other violators paying fines in the court included: Gail B. Fenwick, overload, $10; Paul F. Ridenour, $15; Lewis A. Rose, overload, $10; Joseph Theodore, overload, $45. Overweight load, $10; Donald S. Wyman, overload, $15.

Proposed Housing Industry Control Scored at Meet

SPOKANE, Feb. 19—(AP)—Declaring that building construction costs have risen "41 per cent less than the national average for all consumer's products," Edward G. Gavin of Chicago declared yesterday that the industry should stop apologizing and began bragging.

Gavin, editor of the American Builder Magazine, spoke before the Western Retail Lumbermen's Association annual convention. He attacked "bureaucratic opportunists" who he said advocate government controls of the housing industry.

In 1947, he said, "American home builders finished 850,000 homes as compared with 133,000 hovelts that were finished in Russia under a system of controls."

A. J. Huddleston, president of the Lakeside Lumber Company of Oswego, Ore., attacked "back-of-the-hand gossip" about the industry, and said:

"We cannot help wondering whether this type of talk is done to halt inflation or whether it is brought on to promote new scarcity which would undoubtedly increase the price of houses and force a public demand for federal control of the housing industry."

SANTA CLAUS WEDS

Supply of Meat Lowest Since '39, Value at New High

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19—(AP)—America's meat-on-the-hoof supply has dropped to the lowest level since 1939.

An Agriculture Department report said the number of cattle, hogs and sheep on farms all went down during 1947. So did the number of chickens and turkeys.

These are meats being grown for the market and the breeding animals which must supply the future's meat.

Livestock numbers went up during early years of the war. Prices were rising and farmers wanted to produce all the meat they could. A peak in numbers was reached in 1943.

Then help got short. Farmers could not take care of so many animals. A decline in numbers began and has continued.

On Jan. 1, the number of animals was four per cent below what it was a year earlier. It was 16 per cent under Jan. 1, 1944. The department said the continuing decline is due to various causes, including:

1. High prices for meat. This encourages farmers to sell cattle and hogs. 2. Reduced feed supplies and high prices of feeds. This discourages farmers from keeping and feeding livestock.

Although numbers were smaller, the farm value of livestock and poultry on Jan. 1 was at a record $13,451,000,000 due to high prices. This value was 12 per cent above last year and 90 per cent above the 1937-46 average.
