GIFT GOSSIP

by Margie

Hello there, all you reminiscent people: How many of you interested bystanders can remember when the present Star Theater was known as the Palace? That was before its successful run as the Liberty, a by product of World War I. The Palace was a scintillating bit of architectural gingerbread, white and sparkling, and rather amazing to a little country girl. Movies were not shown there, but all of the road shows, stock companies, Lyceums and home talent productions were enacted upon its boards. That was maybe 35 years ago, and long before DOROTHY'S took up business at 115 S. Stephens St., a regular palace of fine arts in its own right.

Now that the good old days are definitely past history, let's make the best of it and find consolation in the thought that 35 years hence these present times will be looked back upon as the good old days, with appropriate nostalgia. So, if you're going to town, let's be on our merry way. There's a quantity of shopping to be done at DOROTHY'S, not to mention all the joking one can accomplish on the side.

First on our list is a set of plastic coated place mats for the dining table. Saves with the laundry, you know. Just wipe 'em off with a damp cloth and they're ready to function again. We rather lean to the bamboo design, but the dogwood is a close runner-up. Guess we'll have to flip a coin, in DOROTHY'S direction. That ought to decide it.

And look here what we've found! A plastic ball-bearing yarn holder, built on scientific lines, to aid and abet all that crocheting and knitting we have lined up for the future. They're weighed on the bottom, so there's no teetering and tipping. And besides, they'll cling to the arm of an overstuffed chair like a burr to the tail of a dawg. One more item; a box of those artistic book plates to put our personal sign and seal on our wandering library, DOROTHY'S, on Stephens. Give 'er a whirl, girl. Margie. (Paid Adv.)
