BEFORE going any farther, let's get some of the fundamentals straight in our minds.

In this country, men can't be compelled to work if they don't want to work. We settled that issue in four bloody years of war in the early 60's. We aren't likely to go back on the settlement. Slavery is dead forever, so far as the United States is concerned.

The point in this miner case is that ONE MAN ordered the miners out on strike and refused to send them back to work (pending a settlement of their dispute with their employers) when ordered to do so by a COURT. It is obvious that if our courts can be disobeyed with impunity our whole system (upon which our liberties are based) would go to pot. In such an event, ANY ONE MAN with a considerable disciplined following (say the leader of the Communist party in the United States) could weaken us fatally at a critical moment.

We can't permit that to happen.

* * *

THE trouble with John L. Lewis is that he has too much power. So implicit is the obedience which his followers yield to him that there is practically NOTHING he can't do. The clear lesson of history is that power like that has ruined almost everyone who has possessed it.

Nobody has charged Lewis with being an enemy of his country. But---if it should develop that his power over his followers is so absolute that it can not be challenged even by the COURTS—it might go to his head to such an extent that he WOULD become an enemy. It might reach the point where he would say to himself: "I AM AMERICA."

Supreme, unchallenged power in one pair of hands has ALWAYS been dangerous. It is dangerous still. We mustn't let John L. Lewis, or anybody else, get bigger than the law.

* * *

IT isn't a question of compelling men to work against their will. If any miner decides he doesn't want to mine coal any longer, he can quit his job and every sincere thinker in America will back him up in his right to do so.

What we have to prevent is the acquisition of complete, unchallengeable power BY ONE MAN over the actions of hundreds of thousands of disciplined followers.

Whenever we permit that, we're goners.

Skies of Italy Brighter, Pope's Election Comment

ROME, April 23.—(AP)—Pope Pius XII, in a formal statement to the American press, said yesterday the Italian elections "will be memorable in the annals of Italian history."

"An entire people," the Pope said, "has given proof of its grave sense of civic duty and the skies of Italy are brighter with hope * * *."

The Pope implicitly deplored "the error" of those who voted for the Communists.

"Our own paternal heart turns, saddened by the spectacle of so many, who in their egoism or blindness stubbornly held to the path that can lead only to disaster for body and soul alike", he said.

"May He in His mercy and love illumine their minds, so that they may see the error of their way."

CATASTROPHE

CARLSBAD, N. M., April 23.—(AP)—Tom, the cat, long amazed workers by his ability to open a door latch and enter a potash mine hoist house.

But when a dog took chase, Tom forgot his learning.

He jumped for the nearest pole. But it was made of steel. Tom fell 940 feet to his death in the mine shaft.

OREGON MOTHER OF 1948

By CHARLES V. STANTON

Mrs. Stanley L. Kidder of Roseburg, has been elected Oregon Mother of 1948—a well deserved honor.

As proven by this and previous selections, the committee, charged with the task of making the choice from a large number of women nominated by the various communities of the state, is not influenced by the wealth or social status of the candidate, but seeks those qualities which may furnish a source of inspiration to others. At the same time the award is not to one individual alone, but is a tribute to motherhood in general, calling attention to the fact that a good mother is as much, or more, deserving of honor and public recognition as is the First Citizen or other person who may be honored for achievements in public service.

Mrs. Kidder was not chosen because she was in any way superior to thousands upon thousands of other Oregon mothers. She was selected, rather, because she is typical, or a representative, of the ideal type of motherhood.

So, while she is entitled to community acclaim for the honor bestowed upon her, she shares felicitations with all mothers everywhere who are given public honor and recognition through the merited tribute paid her as their representative.

Much mention is made in the press of Mrs. Kidder's civic service, her work in fraternal orders, with parent-teacher associations, with the Red Cross and in religious activities. It is evident, as one inquires into the work done in behalf of the community and its organizations, that the labors represent a deep devotion to family. The character of a community, the efficiency of its schools, the qualities of religion and charity make deep and lasting impressions upon the community's youth and profoundly influence personalities in later life. Thus the responsibility of motherhood carries with it a responsibility in community service which all too many overlook or neglect but which finds striking exemplification in the achievements of the Oregon Mother of 1948.

It is therefore with great pride that the Roseburg community acclaims and congratulates Mrs. Kidder, and appreciation is given the Roseburg Business and Professional Women's Club which sponsored her nomination.

THE COST OF RESTORATION

Earlier this week we had a most interesting interview with Charles J. Graham, president of the Pittsburgh and West Virginia railroad, who visited briefly in Roseburg. Traveling in a luxurious private car, he is making an extended tour of the Pacific Northwest and British Columbia, particularly contacting representatives of the firms which route traffic over the railroad he serves.

He is very enthusiastic over the work being done in Pittsburgh to restore some of the natural beauty. As a member of the city's planning commission, he has helped in forming plans to convert many business blocks into huge public parks. A campaign has largely eliminated the industrial city's smoke and "smog." Many blocks of unsightly structures are being removed and will be replaced by parks, playgrounds and off-street parking garages.

We were particularly interested in plans for stream improvement for which he said Pittsburgh alone is planning to spend more than $80 million. The great city is situated at the junction of the Monongahela and Allegheny rivers where they unite to form the Ohio River. Today those streams are but open sewers. Hundreds of cities and towns pour in sewage and industrial waste. Virtually no fish life exists in these heavily polluted waters. Yet within a few years, according to present plans, these streams will again be filled with clear and reasonably pure water. But it will cost many millions of dollars.

Here in the Pacific Northwest we are experiencing expanding population, business and industry. Our streams are becoming more and more polluted daily. We are making a weak control effort but are losing ground steadily.

Should we not take heed of the cost of neglect and start now to strengthen our anti-pollution campaign and save the millions of dollars restoration will cost at some future date if we neglect the task now?

Fire Fighting Methods Slated for Changes

Reorganization of fire fighting methods on the Umpqua National Forest will be reviewed here Tuesday by L. L. Colville of Portland, assistant chief of the division fire control at the regional office, said Ray B. Hampton, fire control officer for the Umpqua Forest.

Changes in transportation, greater mileage of logging roads, accumulation of more cut-over areas make necessary a review of the fire organization for the coming season, Hampton said. Colville is making a similar survey on other national forests of the Northwest region.

Most birds brood their eggs for periods ranging from 13 days to eight weeks.

Forester Tells Of His Observations While in Russia

"If within the next 30 years Russia becomes half as good as the Communists think she is now, that will be the greatest achievement of modern history!"

That was a statement by Albert Carlson, timber aporaiser with the U. S. Bureau of Land Management here, who told the Roseburg Rotary Club Thursday of his experiences as a forester in Russia.

Carlson was employed as a forest engineer with the Karelian Timber Trust of the Soviet government between 1933 and 1936. His remarks were based on personal observation of social and economic conditions there.

"I could not have chosen a more difficult subject," he said. "The importance of Russia (in world affairs) has been gaining." He explained that that nation has been an "unknown quantity" and would be better understood if the fact were realized that Russia is distinct and apart from Western Europe.

People Kept in Ignorance

Russia was isolated in the days of the empire and continued so after the Bolshevik revolution of 1917. The people of Russia have been kept in ignorance of world affairs and were "indifferent" to the overthrow of the Czar.

Carlson said he believes the "Iron Curtain" serves two purposes—to keep the Soviet citizen from knowing what goes on in the world outside, and to keep the outside world from knowing what goes on inside Russia.

"A Russian raised under Soviet tutelage and emerging for the first time in the non-Soviet world is a strange and bewildered creature," Carlson quoted a Red official as saying.

Carlson described the Red purge of 1936, when high Soviet officials and army officers were executed for treason for their "friendliness" to Nazi Germany. The government signed a treaty of friendship with Germany in 1939.

Anyone hoping to "understand" Russia should study its history and economic conditions, Carlson reminded. The nation is still industrially weak. Production falls far short of that of the United States.

Three Judges Must Hear Suit Against Timber Contract

PORTLAND, April 23—(AP)—A federal judge ruled yesterday that a suit to prevent the government from signing a sustained yeild timber cutting contract must be heard by three judges.

Judge Claude Mc Colloch said he would arrange for two Federal District Court and one U. S. Circuit Court judges to hear the case here April 30 and May 1.

The suit, brought by the Western Association of Lumbermen and Loggers and George E. Owen, Lane County sawmill owner, asks that the Secretary of the Interior be enjoined from signing a 100-year cutting and marketing timber agreement with the Fischer Lumber Company of Marcola, Oregon.

The agreement would cover private and public timber on the Mohawk River sustained yield forest project. Some independent lumbermen have opposed such agreements, contending they are monopolistic.

Judge Mc Colloch told attorneys from both sides yesterday that he could not issue an injunction against the Secretary of the Interior himself, and arranged for the three-judge hearing.

Defendants in the case are Secretary of the Interior Julius A. Krug, Assistant Secretary C. Girard Davidson, Walter H. Horning, regional administrator of the Bureau of Land Management: Travis M. Tyrrell, chief forester of the O & C land administration, and the Fischer Lumber Company.

The U. S. attorney, who plans to act on behalf of the government representatives, was directed to file his motion this week.

Safety Council Chairmen To be Announced Later

At a meeting of the newly organized Douglas County Safety Council Thursday night in the City Hall, the principal business centered on the selection of chairmen for the various committees and upon projects for early consideration.

Miss Mavis Hasbargen, county chairman, announced that the committee chairmen would be announced at a later date.

She reported to the group also that she had been informed Douglas County was the first in the state to organize under the Governor's Traffic Safety Council program.

Foresty Officials Attending Conferences

Conferences of national forest supervisors and administrative assistants have called M. M. Nelson and Clarence Rand, of the Umpqua National Forest, to Portland this week. Nelson is sitting in with other forest supervisors, while Rand is attending sessions on administrative matters. The two groups will have a joint session Saturday.

ATTENDS CONFERENCE

Mrs. Catherine Masters, executive secretary of the Douglas County Chapter of the American Red Cross, is in Klamath Falls this week attending a Red Cross conference of home service workers. She will return here Monday. She attended a similar conference at Salem earlier in the week.

Dr. Evans to Resign As Superintendent Of State Hospital

SALEM, Ore., April 23.—(AP)—Dr. John C. Evans, superintendent of the Oregon State Hospital for the past 11 years, will resign within 30 days because of ill health, a high state official reveals.

Dr. Evans, who has been associated with the state hospital for 43 years, will be asked to remain on the staff as a consultant, this source said.

It was reported that Dr. Charles Bates, who is now acting as superintendent while Dr. Evans is finishing up three months' sick leave, has been offered the superintendent's job. But Dr. Bates has not made up his mind whether to take it.

Dr. Evans supervised the huge expansion program at the hospital, which includes the $1,500,000 treatment hospital now under construction.

As consultant, he would continue to supervise the building program, as well as to assist in treatment of patients.

Dr. Evans was appointed superintendent Aug. 2, 1937, to succeed the late Dr. R. E. Lee Steiner. For many years he had been assistant superintendent under Dr. Steiner.

Organization Of Teen-Agers Given Support of Lions

Support of the Roseburg Lions Club for a teen-age organization in the city was assured at the club's weekly dinner meeting Thursday night at the Umpqua Hotel. Bill Unrath reported that the movement was under way, and that the various civic groups and lodges would be asked to have delegates at a meeting tentatively scheduled early in May.

Del McKay reported on the Teen-Age club program and broad cast at Canyonville last Saturday, and spoke highly of the club activities there. Other members voiced approval.

Unrath, chairman of the Lions food concession at the fair grounds during the rodeo, reported he has lined up the following committee heads: Assistant chairman, Jim Bewley; Lions identity, Matt Slankard; finance, Walter Welker, Thomas Hartfiel and H. D. Palmer; advertising, Joe Spousta and Unrath; hamburgers, Jerry Gilbo; cooks, Bob Simmons and Mayor Albert G. Flegel; stand sales, Dr. J. E. Campbell, Walt Allen, Dr. Earl Neuru and Joe Wykoff; counter sales, Marshall Haughn; stove and gas, Al Parr; loud speaker, Harold Horn; rail and band stand, Luther Wade; buns and bread, Charles Brundage; transportation, Buckley Bell; cleanup, Norman Seifarth.

Phil Harth made a brief report on the state convention at La-Grande. The members were reminded that Cave Junction is having a charter night program on Monday of next week, and members were urged to attend if possible.

As there was no regular program, impromptu group singing and piano selections by Cloyd Riffe were enjoyed.
