taken a licking in ELECTIONS where people are fairly free to vote their convictions. That rather dashes the hope that the people of Western Europe will turn voluntarily to Communism as a way out of their troubles.

What will be Russia's next move? Will it be tougher? Will she drop persuasion and turn to force? If so, where? And how? As to that, only time can tell.

HERE is a guess: The Italians really voted for a trial of the Marshall plan. If the Marshall plan WORKS, they will be happy with their choice. If it doesn't work, they will be disillusioned.

So far, the Marshall plan has been mostly talk. Talk is easy. From here on out, the Marshall plan will be judged not by the rosy words that are uttered about it but by the deeds that are done under it.

JOHN L. LEWIS gets a personal $20,000 fine and his miners union gets a $1,400,000 fine for contempt of court. The contempt was incurred when a court order to go back to work pending a settlement of the strike was ignored.

The fine is for criminal contempt only. Both Lewis and his union were found guilty of BOTH criminal and civil contempt. Disposal of the civil contempt conviction was held over for a few days—presumably to see what the miners were going to do about compliance with the law.

If they choose to go on ignoring it, it is possible that a progressive fine may be imposed upon them—that is, a fine of so much for every day they stay away from work. In cases of civil contempt, penalties are based on damages done. It is obvious that the longer coal is not mined the greater the damage will be.

BACK of this coal ruckus lies the principle of the greatest good to the greatest number. It is important to ALL OF US that enough coal be mined to keep the nation's production up to what it ought to be. When production is upset, we all suffer.

The purpose of law in free countries is to insure that the rights of ALL be protected. Law is worthless unless it can be enforced. That is why this coal case is so interesting to everybody.

Counties Plan Fight On Welfare Commission

ONTARIO, Ore., April 24.—(AP)—Six Eastern Oregon counties intend to carry a fight against the State Welfare Commission to the next session of the legislature.

Malheur county heads the fight. The commission told the county to raise its welfare budget $4,000. The county court accused the commission of "usurping powers of the people" and said it would stand by its original $39,579 figure.

Five other Eastern Oregon counties endorsed this stand. County Judge Irwin Tronxwell said the State Association of Counties also would be asked to endorse the protest. He added the counties would attempt to get the matter before the next legislature.

CREED OF PROFESSION

By CHARLES V. STANTON

The Associated Press is "dedicated to one ideal: to present facts truthfully, impartially, accurately—and interestingly," says a statement prepared by the board of directors. The statement was issued in connection with the 100th anniversary convention in progress in New York.

"In a world gripped by tension and conflicting political ideologies," the statement adds, "the association's responsibility for its news coverage becomes ever greater."

At the anniversary luncheon, the association was warned by Lord Rothermere, British publisher, that "a cloud of wishful neutrality" is forming in Europe.

The news must be reported. Ignorance, as you know better than anybody, breeds isolationism. Isolationism breeds neutrality. Look eastwards across the Atlantic and you will see forming on the horizon a cloud of wishful neutrality. Today no bigger than a man's hand perhaps, but capable tomorrow of assuming menacing proportions.

Isolationism and neutrality could be extremely dangerous to the United States and Great Britain. We need allies in the "battle for Europe" being waged by Communism.

Through the medium of a free press the barrier of ignorance in world events and world politics can be breached. But only if people are given the truth and not held subject to a controlled press.

But even a free press offers problems. As stated by the directors of the Associated Press, there is a responsibility to present facts truthfully, impartially, accurately.

It is not difficult to distort a news story or to present only one side of a controversial subject. But few newspapers can be found using such tactics. With but few exceptions, publishers and editors strive to print both sides of a controversial issue, and to report news as accurately as the ever-present danger of human error and ignorance will permit.

A reporter may do a better job on a subject with which he is familiar and regarding which he has background material than on a subject with which he is totally unfamiliar. But the effort is toward unbiased and unprejudiced presentation of news.

The editorial column may be used by the editor to express his personal views and those of the paper he serves on a controversial subject. Even in such presentation, the average editor usually admits and reviews arguments of the opposition as he endeavors to refute them.

But despite the efforts of the press to be impartial and objective, it has one medium which casts much confusion into the picture—columns written by unqualified columnists. And what is true of the press is doubly true of the radio.

The newspaper reporter and editor are trained through years of experience to handle news and opinion objectively. They are indoctrinated in the creed of their profession. They take pride in craftsmanship. Honesty, and the knowledge that they are subject to criticism and rebuttal, tend to keep their efforts directed into seeking public confidence. But the press, particularly in recent years, has fallen for "big name" commentators—men and women who have had no newspaper training or experience, who know nothing of, and care less for, the creed of the profession, and who will twist and distort facts and information to advance ideologies.

The great majority of news commentators are well qualified, highly trained and expert observers who can be counted on to report accurately, but because the public has learned to trust and believe these writers it does not recognize those other commentators who serve "isms" and ideologies and are accepted only because of their names and position.

The radio is a worse offender than the press. One can hear daily the blatant voices of commentators to whom the truth is only something to be distorted and exploited for sensational values; who report more of imagination than fact, each seeking to be more lurid and melodramatic than his fellows.

The public is not gullible, but because of the responsibility the press has endeavored to exercise throughout many years, the public trusts that persons charged with dissemination of news are attempting accuracy, and thus many persons accept statements without question. The commentator who "waves the flag" while uttering malicious gossip and distorted facts often becomes a Hooper favorite—and as long as he has his Hooper rating, why should he worry about facts?

The people of Europe need a free press. It is essential to future peace and well being. For only an informed and intelligent people can exist at peace. But it would not hurt if the domestic press avoided confusing the public mind, not by stifling free speech nor expression of ideas, but by requiring its columnists without exception to practice the creed of the profession.

Arts Prize Winners To Be Guests at Luncheon

Fifteen Roseburg High School Industrial Arts department boys who submitted prize winning projects in the recent art display, sponsored by the Roseburg Chamber of Commerce, will be guests of the Chamber at the weekly noon luncheon Monday in the Umpqua Hotel.

These 15 students, who copped 21 prizes, will also be presented with gifts from local merchants as awards for their efforts. The dinner and sponsorship of the exhibit was undertaken by the chamber in appreciation of the industrial arts students' work in making 60 Santa Clauses used on the uptown lamp posts before Christmas.

R. L. Edie, industrial arts instructor, will also be a guest.

Half Cow, Half Deer Stumps Cattleman

BALTIMORE, April 24.—(AP)—Farmer H. Y. Thompson's calf which he claimed was sired by a deer, had veteran cattlemen at the union stockyards here scratching their heads.

Thompson said he didn't give a hoot about whether the half cow, half deer was scientifically possible.

"I know the facts about this critter," he added.

He claimed a big buck deer had been cavorting with his herd at Bel Air, Md., for years.

The calf, out of an Aberdeen-Angus cow, has a head and snout shaped like a deer and its hide is a mottled gray instead of the conventional Angus coal black. The legs are long and thin instead of stumpy and fat and it weighs only 500 pounds' instead of the normal 1,000.

But whatever it is, it will soon be on meat platters. Thompson is selling the critter to a packing company.

Paul G. Hoffman is a name in the news these days since he's been handed the rugged job of running the European Recovery Program. If he were looking for a bed of roses, this isn't it. Mr. H. is going to have to keep sixteen foreign nations, Washington and about 145 million Americans happy. As one Washington official says, "He will be a cursed man." He'll need more patience than a first grade teacher and more diplomacy than a husband who has forgotten two anniversaries in a row.

Mr. Hoffman has just returned from Japan, where he served on the Draper Committee, making an economic survey. During the war he was on a dozen different committees. He's smarter than a Quiz Kid's answer, but he's sure got his hands full this time . . . and we wish him luck.

It wasn't luck though that made John Marks high gun Sunday at the Roseburg Rod and Gun Club's Winchester trap layout. When an old timer like John breaks fifty straight it isn't luck, friends, it's skill. Incidentally the club holds regular trap shoots every Sunday, with Fred Kuck, of C. A. A. in charge. Drive out and take a look if you're interested.

You know, when the windshield of your car gets cluttered with bugs, dirt and mud . . . you've "got your hands full" when it comes to safe driving! A MOPAR "Jiffy Jet" Windshield Washer is what you need! At the press of a toe, it sprays two streams of liquid cleaner on your windshield . . . and the wiper blades sweep clean!
