problems of the Jews and the Arabs, but are trying to KEEP EACH OTHER from getting a strangle-hold on the strategic advantages of the Near and the Middle East.

It isn't a very pretty picture any way you look at it.

FOR that matter, NO picture in which the "big powers" have taken a hand has ever been a very pretty one to look at. Whenever, since history began, the big powers have entered the international politics game ordinary human justice and the rights of small peoples have usually taken to the brush for whatever shelter may be found there until the big power storm blows over.

That's a cynical size-up, you say?

It certainly is—but it isn't far from the truth.

IF the United States could reach the point where it stands simply, plainly and honestly as THE PROTECTOR OF THE RIGHTS OF DECENT, HONORABLE SMALL PEOPLES THROUGHOUT THE WORLD, it would have a foreign policy that everybody could understand and that most of us would be willing to die for if we got into trouble backing it up.

A WEEK or so ago somebody in our State Department wrote a note of some sort to Molotov in Moscow. It didn't work so good.

Molotov twisted it around and made it look like we were getting weak and scared and ready to talk turkey to great and ALWAYS RIGHT Russia. He then went on the air with it and made it sound to our friends in Western Europe (Britain, France, etc.) as if we were going over their heads and talking peace ON OUR OWN with the Soviets without taking our partners in on the play.

All in all, he made rather a monkey of us.

OVER the weekend, Henry Wallace took his pen in hand and wrote a letter to Stalin. He told all about how America and Russia can be buddies. The way to start the love feast off, he said, is to DO AWAY WITH THE ATOM BOMB—which we have and Russia hasn't got, yet.

Uncle Joe seems to have read the letter, grabbed the phone, called the Moscow radio and told the world via the air waves that he's FOR IT—especially the part about doing away with OUR atom bombs.

Again our faces are red and Moscow is chuckling.

Writing open letters is dangerous business, but this writer is feeling cocky this morning. How about something like this:

Dear Joe:

We have the atom bomb, and you haven't. That puts us one up on you. But we're broad-minded and are always willing to talk peace. Here's the low-down:

Call off your Communist dogs. Quit trying to upset our applecart. Let us run our internal shebang the way we like and we'll let you run yours the way you like. Lay off on this veto business. Give United Nations a chance to work. Pull up the iron curtain. Let us see what you're doing as freely as we let you see what we're doing. Turn in and help us build up the war-wrecked world instead of hanging back in the hope that if people are kept hungry enough long enough they'll turn to Communism as a last resort.

ODE TO EDENBOWER

By CHARLES V. STANTON

Now that election campaigning is out of the way we can return to the subject of early-day Douglas County post offices and report some of the interesting information we have been receiving.

Edenbower, we have learned from responses to the appeal of Lewis A. McArthur, Oregon historian, received its name from a very beautiful poem written by Mrs. Helen R. Ferguson, who, at the age of 94 years, still makes her home in Roseburg.

Donald Ferguson and his wife, Helen, came from Winnipeg, Canada, in 1888, buying a farm from John Jones, who then owned nearly all the property in what is now known as Edenbower. The contrast between the winter climate with that of Winnipeg so entranced Mrs. Ferguson that she wrote the poem "Winter—A Contrast," and mailed it to relatives in Canada. The poem was read before a literary society and was published in the Roseburg Review furnishing inspiration for naming the post office and school. Naturally, the community became known by the same title.

The poem (copied from clippings still retained by Mrs. Ferguson) is as follows:

The clouds hang low, the hills look green,
The gurgling Umpqua flows between;
From it ascends a misty shroud,
That takes the form of a silvery cloud,
Which soon brings on a pleasant shower,
Making this vale an EDEN BOWER.

O, my heart with grateful feelings glow
That I left a land of frost and snow,
And came to this far-famed balmy west,
To this land with a lovely climate blest;

And my mission here now seems to be,
To try and set more icebound victims free,
Who dwell in a land of frost and snow
Where cyclones rage and blizzards blow.
For why should they through tempests grope,
When there is such a clime as the Pacific Slope?

Such a favored spot as this Umpqua vale,
That ne'er can tell an awful tale,
Of furious storms and driving snow,
But it can tell how the balmy breezes blow.
How the sparkling dew, and pleasant showers,
And warm bright sunshine give birth to flowers,
And old King Frost with his icy pall,
Makes a very short stay if he comes at all.
Nov. 1, 1888. —HRF.

Edenbower, according to Mrs. John Ferguson, Days Creek, who, with her sister-in-law, Miss Catherine Ferguson, Roseburg, combined to compile early-day facts, included all the land west of the railroad tracks, all of the Calkins area, and out to the Ed Marks and Morris Weber farms. The present Veterans Hospital reservation also was included. There were no residents at that time in what is now known as Riverside. Morris Weber was roadmaster. The present road was built in 1903.

Speaking of the road, Mrs. Ferguson says:

It burns us up to have it called the Garden Valley road. Garden Valley is across Brown's bridge from the Weber places and Garden Valley settlement is across that bridge.

John Bottcher was the first postmaster, Mrs. Ferguson reports. He was operating the Edenbower store at the time. John Tollman was the next postmaster, serving until the rural route was started during the first World War. Efforts to have the mail route established out of Edenbower rather than from Roseburg were made through circulation of petitions, asking that Elvin Cloake be named carrier, but the effort failed.

We'll work our free enterprise production system for all it's worth. We'll swap our products, and everybody will be happy. And CUT OUT your secret police. Let your people speak their minds as we let ours speak their minds. In that way, real and lasting international friendships can be built.

How about it, Joe? We'll play on those terms if you will.

FDR Picked Hopkins To Succeed Him

WASHINGTON, May 21.—(AP)—President Roosevelt in 1938 had chosen Harry L. Hopkins to run for president in 1940, but Hopkins' ill health later caused abandonement of the plan, Robert E. Sherwood reported today.

In the first of a series in Collier's magazine based on Hopkins' secret papers, Sherwood, author-dramatist who assisted Roosevelt in preparing many of his speeches told of an "extraordinary private conversation" at the White House in the spring of 1938.

At this meeting, Sherwood said Hopkins' papers disclosed, Roosevelt vetoed seven potential Democratic presidential candidates before picking Hopkins.

Roosevelt first discussed Hopkins political liabilities—that he had been divorced and his health was bad—but ended by expressing "the belief that Hopkins would be elected and would do the best job as president of any of those then in the running," Sherwood wrote.

As part of a build-up for Hopkins, the article said, the president appointed him Secretary of Commerce on Christmas Eve, 1938.

This all came to naught, however, for Hopkins was stricken with a near-fatal illness in the next year and a half and he was unable to run. The illness even "drained him of all personal ambition," Sherwood wrote.

Hopkins started compiling the papers before he died on Jan. 28, 1946. Sherwood finished the task after pouring over 40 crates of official documents, memoranda

Norblad Asks Fertilizer For Oregon

WASHINGTON, May 21.—(AP)—Rep. Norblad (R.-Ore.) predicted today that Congress will pass legislation under which the Commerce Department could furnish material for making fertilizer at the Salem, Ore., fertilizer plant.

The plant, constructed by the government, recently was sold to the Columbia Metals Co., by the War Assets Administration, but Norbald said it was forced to close down because of inability to obtain materials.

The representative said he believed Congress will approve his bill inserting in the present law thority to control only the finish-control basic fertilizer material (nitrogenous compounds).

The department now has authority to control oni ythe finished product.

"Under by bill," Norbald said in a statement, "the Department of Commerce would direct that a certain part of this base material go to fertilizer which would be for export.

"The effect of this would be to make available more than enough fertilizer for our foreign commitments and in turn a much larger amount for our farmers. We hope that this will give us a sufficient allotment to reopen our Salem plant."

Norbald said that House committees agreed his proposal is the best solution for the present shortage of base materials for fertilizer.

Mrs. Clarke Gets Post In Society to Aid Crippled

Mrs. Arthur Clarke of Roseburg has been elected to the board of trustees of the Oregon chapter of the National Society for Crippled Children and Adults. Her election was announced at Portland today.

At the same time, it was announced that Jesse Rosenbaum of LaGrande had been elected president, succeeding Douglas McKay of Salem, who held the post since the chapter's organization two years ago.

Rosenbaum, president fo the Rosenbaum Sales Agency in LaGrande, had served as president of the chapter's Eastern Oregon
