Turkey Breeding Flocks Bringing Record Price

PORTLAND, Or., May 21.—The bulk of Oregon's turkey breeding flocks is being marketed this week, with producers receiving highest prices in history for birds from which they have already sold record numbers of hatching eggs.

Net prices to growers are around 47 cents on hens, 43 to 44 cents on toms. Some growers, showing the usual tendency of farmers in a tight market situation, are reported to be storing the birds and holding out for 50 cents on hens.

Local killing plants were swamped with the flood of marketings this week, and several reported receipts were more than could be handled.
