

U. N. Can't Function Until Issue Of Red World Revolution is Settled

AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

The working committee of the United Nations Commission for conventional armaments (those apart from atomic weapons) finally has decided that armaments can't be reduced and controlled until the big powers agree on a U. N. police force, atomic energy is leashed and peace treaties are made with Germany and Japan.

In short this momentous question, which is the crux of the effort to enforce world peace, is being temporarily shelved. The committee's explanation strikes us as being a bit of diplomatic shadow boxing because the blunt fact is that the United Nations can't function as a peace controlling agency until the cold war between Russia and the Democracies has been settled.

Presumably this problem of enforcing peace will come up in the U. N. again—and then again and again. But it never can be solved until the issue of world revolution for the spread of Communism has been dealt with. A British viewpoint of the fundamental difference between Russia and the West is summed up by the weekly publication "Time and Tide," and I quote it because it represents the consensus of many objective observers:

"The issue is whether Russia means to carry on with or abandon her plans for the destruction of the Democracies. If she will abandon them, there is no issue which cannot be peacefully solved. The argument as to whether Russia wants war is beside the point."

"In all probability she does not want it now. From Russia's point of view a 'shooting war' is not to be undertaken until the process of internal erosion in the Democracies has reached the point where only the very slightest push from without would be necessary to topple over the whole structure."

That's the story. The battle of Berlin and the innumerable other cold hostilities all hinge on Bolshevism's effort to Communize the world. We shall get an easement of the German imbroglio, and the hundred and one other difficulties encircling the globe, if and when the Russians decide that they have carried their aggression about as far as they can for the present.

Let us not fool ourselves into thinking that we can have peace while Communism is reaching for power in all countries—not at least in America.

LIQUOR POST FILLED

PORTLAND, July 28.—(AP)—William A. Hatley has been named enforcement Division Supervisor for the State Liquor Commission, Administrator William H. Hammon said today.

Hatley, former Secret Service operative, succeeds Edwin C. Snow, who is on military leave of absence.

Training Course For Supervised Driving Slated

Registrations for the fifth annual fleet supervisors' training course, to be held in Portland, August 16-20 now are being received at the offices of the Oregon State Motor Association, it was announced today.

The course is conducted by the Oregon State College with instructors provided by the American Automobile Association, through its Oregon affiliate, the Motor Association.

The course covers such subjects as driver selection and training, maintenance and conservation of equipment, driver attitudes, I. C. C. and other road regulations, responsibility for accidents and other subjects designed to improve efficiency and safety in fleet operation.

Material for the present course has been revised and new material added, the Motor Association reported.

Students enrolled will receive manual showing how the modern pattern of fleet supervision may be installed and operated.

Preaching Unsatisfactory Job, Gloomy Dean Decides

LONDON, July 28.—(AP)—The one-time gloomy dean of St. Paul's, Dr. W. R. Inge, said today he is convinced after a lifetime in the pulpit that preaching is an unsatisfactory business.

"It is like throwing a bucketful of water over a row of narrow-necked vessels," he said. "A drop or two may find its way in here and there."

The 88-year-old cleric's speech was read for him at the conference of modern churchmen, Dr. Inge, who recently underwent two operations, was unable to appear in person.

Industrial use of silver in the United States has amounted to about 100,000,000 ounces a year since World War II, more than three times as much annually as before the war.
