dramatic events leading up to it, and the far-reaching reverberations.

During the flaming controversy the white-bearded jurist placidly directed the tribunal's proceedings just as he did in the preceding years of tranquility.

Many Honors Awarded

Before his appointment by President Hoover in 1930 to succeed William Howard Taft, many other honors had been heaped upon Mr. Hughes. They included: Governor of New York, 1907 to 1910;

Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, 1910 to 1916;

Republican nominee for President of the United States in 1916, when he was defeated by Woodrow Wilson in one of the closest races in history, the electoral vote being 277 to 254;

Secretary of State from 1921 to 1925 in the Harding and Coolidge cabinets.

Regarded as one of the ablest lawyers in the country, he attracted national attention early in his career by his mastery of conduct as counsel for a New York legislative committee which investigated the life insurance business. Out of that came the model on which state and national legislation dealing with life insurance still exists.

Entered College at 14

He was born at Glens Falls, N. Y., April 11, 1882. His father was a Welsh Baptist clergyman. Both father and mother desired their son to enter the ministry and they were deeply disappointed when he chose the law instead.

Before he was eight years old he had read all the works of Shakespeare. Too young to enter college, he studied at home; at fourteen he entered Colgate University, remained two years and transferred to Brown where he was graduated at the age of nineteen. His law degree was obtained at Columbia.

He married, Dec. 5, 1888, Antonette Carter, daughter of C. S. Carter, senior member of the law firm which Mr. Hughes joined.

His retirement from the high bench came when he was 79. He announced on June 2, 1941, that he would relinquish his post the following July 1 because of "considerations of health and age."

Swim Season At Templin Beach Lures Big Throng

An estimated 10,000 swimmers took advantage of opportunities afforded at Templin Beach this past season. Director Ray Brown reported Thursday at a meeting of the Roseburg Recreational Committee in the office of the superintendent of schools.

Brown explained that many of these were counted several times, so that the actual number of persons participating would not be so great.

Supervised swimming was started at the beach June 7 and continued until Aug. 15. The condition of the river, because of late rains, remained good all season, and there has been no official condemnation of the water even to the present time. The water was tested at intervals and found to be in good condition. However, precautionary measures were taken in that all regular swimming participants were required to have typhoid and diphtheria inoculations.

No life saving certificates were taught how to swim in supervised classes, said Brown. The class attendance was not as constant as expected because of the relatively cool summer season.

No life saving certificates were given, as Brown, while considered by the recreation committee as a well qualified swimming director did not have a Red Cross Life Saving certificate. The committee stated it expects to correct this situation next year, as the Red Cross is planning to conduct a life saving course of instruction for adults prior to the start of swimming next summer.

No casualties at beach. There were no casualties at Templin Beach. The one drowning this summer in the Umpqua river did not occur in connection with the swimming program, Brown reported. However, five persons were reported in trouble in the water and were brought immediately to safety by life guards, or other swimmers. This fact alone, the committee reported, more than paid for the cost of a swimming program.

In addition to Brown, two qualified life guards were on duty. Their hours were staggered so that there was supervised swimming 11 hours daily for five days a week and four hours a day on Saturday and Sunday. The guards were Don Hubbard and Bob Rogers.

Other activities sponsored during the first part of the summer were horseshoes, volleyball and weight lifting, but this program was eliminated after vandals destroyed the facilities.

Since the close of the season, all borrowed equipment has been returned and other articles have been stored. The dressing rooms have been dismantled and the lumber stored for use next summer.

The recreation committee expressed its thanks to all persons who cooperated and who donated equipment or material.

Dewey Will Win by Huge Margin, Bricker Declares

He said clubs have been formed in Minnesota and the District of Columbia and are being set up in Georgia, Kentucky, Missouri, Oklahoma and Michigan.

Bricker said he is confident his home state of Ohio will give the Dewey-Warren ticket a majority of from 250,000 to 500,000.

From another quarter came evidence that organized labor may not be so solid in supporting Mr. Truman as the joint CIO-AFL meeting would indicate.

The United Mine Workers Journal complained that Mr. Truman hadn't done anything to line up votes to sustain his veto of the Taft-Hartley act. The measure was enacted into law over his veto last year.

Psychologist On Mental Aid Duty At Vets Hospital

Robert P. Allen, above, psychologist, has recently been added to the staff of the Veterans Hospital as chief of Vocational Rehabilitation and Education. In this capacity he will advise patients in vocational and educational matters, working principally with veterans whose physical handicaps necessitate their changing vocations and employment.

When the doctors have determined that a vocational adjustment is necessary, the Rehabilitation Service administers a variety of tests, determining aptitudes, interests, personality, and suitable environments in which the veteran will be best able to progress.

Allen is well prepared in this kind of work, having just been discharged from the Army as a captain in charge of convalescent services in an Army general hospital of over 4000 patients.

Previous to this service he was assistant to the state director of the United States Employment Service for the state of New York. He also was in charge of Vocational Advancement for Handicapped Persons.

It was from the U.S.E.S. that he was furloughed in 1942 to enlist in the Army as a private, and was in the South Pacific theater for two years.

Allen also had five years of experience as personnel assistant and in the manufacturing branch of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. He received his education at Tulane, Columbia, and New York Universities.

Dentist Starts Local Practice

Former Chief Justice Hughes Passes Away

Lincoln, was friendly and had a keen sense of humor. Lost in Close Race

Born in Glen Falls, N.Y., April 11, 1882, he entered Colgate at the age of 14 and graduated from Brown University. After receiving his law degree from Columbia in 1884, he began legal practice in New York.

Elected governor of New York in 1907, he resigned during a second term to become a U.S. associate justice in 1910. He remained on the supreme court bench despite offers from Republicans to make him their presidential candidate in 1908 and 1912.

However, in 1916 he accepted the nomination and left the court to run against Woodrow Wilson. He was defeated in one of the closest races in history—Wilson winning by an electoral vote of 277 to 254 after being given California's vote.

Hughes actually had retired the night before with confidence of being elected, only to wake the next morning and learn of his defeat.

Besides serving as secretary of state under two presidents in the '20's Hughes also was on several special commissions and posts for the government.

President Hoover returned Hughes to the bench as chief justice in 1930, and he presided over the nation's highest court in some of its most momentous days.

With the former jurist and statesman at the time of his death besides his son were two daughters, Mrs. William T. Gossett of Bloomfield Hills, Mich., and Mrs. C. A. Waddell of Riverdale, N.Y.
