U. S. Submarines Undergoing Tests Under Arctic Ice

VANCOUVER, B. C., Sept. 21. —(AP)—Arctic Explorer Sir Hubert Wilkins said here last night that U. S. Navy submarines are undergoing tests beneath Arctic ocean ice.

He made the statement in a speech to the Northwest Aviation Planning Council.

Wilkins predicted that in the event of a future war, submarines hiding under Arctic ice would be used to control guided missiles. He said radar would be unable to detect the subs through the huge thicknesses of ice.

They would carry radio-control equipment, rocket bombs, and boring tu'bes to enable their crews to reach the surface, Wilkins predicts.

Such subs, he said, would get 3,000 miles closer to target industries, no matter which side used them.

Wilkins said that in the new version of the "cold war," bases would also be established on the surface of the Arctic ice cap, which he said is strong enough to support them.

D. W. Rentzel, civil aeronautics administrator, told of CAA plans for the construction of 30 modern airports in Alaska at a cost of $8,249,000.

Yesterday, Norman Allen, assistant to the president of the Boeing Airplane Co., said the American aircraft industry must continue to lean heavily on military production to stay in business.

Mediation Dated In Rail Dispute

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21. —(AP)— The National Mediation Board will meet with railroad and union officials in Chicago Thursday seeking to settle a dispute affecting 1,000,000 workers.

Announcing this, a Board member said conferences will be held separately with spokesmen for the nation's class one railroads and representatives of 16 labor organizations which speak for the vast majority of the "non-operating" employes.

Wage talks between the two sides broke down Friday at Chicago. At that time a union official said "we are taking immediate steps for a strike vote."

Under the Railway Labor Act either side could ask the Mediation Board to intervene. A Board member said that the carriers' committee had asked that the Board's mediation service be invoked.

The Unions gave notice last April 10 that they would ask a 25 cents-an-hour wage increase, reduction in hours from 48 to 40 a week without reduction in pay, time and a half for Saturday work and double time for Sunday.
