Publishers Assn. May Join Defense In Libel Action

EUGENE, Ore., Oct. 19 (AP)—The Oregon Newspaper Publishers' Association directors may join the defense of a criminal libel suit in Lincoln county.

Carl Webb, Association secretary, said facts of the suit filed by State Representative Joe Wilson against the publishers of the Waldport Record are being gathered. He said they would be submitted to the directors for study. Wilson, a candidate for state senator from Lincoln and Tillamook counties, has filed a suit against Mr. and Mrs. Paul Vande Velde, publishers of the Waldport weekly newspaper. Wilson charges that statements reprinted from the Oregon Voter, published in Portland, were critical of him. Vande Velde and his wife were arrested yesterday and freed without bail by Justice of Peace Earl

P. Conrad at Toledo. The publisher demanded an immediate hearing, but in the absence of the Lincoln County district attorney his plea could not be received. The Justice Court did not have jurisdiction on the felony charge. The Waldport publisher said yesterday he would file a counter suit charging false arrest.

Rice Valley

Among the Rice Valley people going hunting in Eastern Oregon recently were Gene Turner, Harvey East, Kenneth LaMarr and Dick Gordon.

Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Shepherd went to Portland the first of the week on business. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wyatt of Oakland have moved into their cabin which they built on the Cecil Hartford property. Mr. Wyatt is employed in the Shepherd mill.

Cro-Magnon man was so called because the first remains of this prehistoric race were found in the cave of Cro-Magnon, France, in 1853.

The story of Neal McGinley

- 1. In 1906, at the age of 21, Neal McGinley came to the United States from County Donegal, Ireland. Five years later he moved to Lompoc, California, with his bride and went to work as a "pumper" in the oil fields for Union Oil Company. Today he is still doing the same kind of work in the same area for the same company.
- 2. But during this 37 years with Union Oil Company, Mr. and Mrs. McGinley have raised a family of 7 children—6 boys and 1 girl. Two of the boys were killed in World War II.† Of the remaining five children, Francis, a graduate of U.S.C., is now manager of a welding equipment company; Ann, a college graduate, is married; Joseph is in the engineering department of an aircraft firm; Lawrence is with a utilities company, and James is a practicing physician in San Francisco.
- 3. Neal McGinley gave us permission to tell his story in order to drive home one fact. He didn't achieve all these advantages for his family by becoming president of Union Oil Company. (In fact, the job he holds today is comparable to the one he held in 1911.) Neither did he do it by going into business for himself. He simply went to work.
- 4. But our American economic system offered him greater opportunity for productive work than he could have found anywhere else in the world. Work by itself means nothing. Only work that produces something—which a man can exchange for the things he needs—is of any value. Consequently the more a man can produce with an hour's work the higher his standard of living.
- 5. During the 37 years that Neal McGinley worked for Union Oil, his capacity to produce increased steadily. For during that time the Company increased the tools-per-employee more than threefold. Consequently production-per-employee went up. And, as a result, Neal McGinley has almost tripled his take-home pay. He makes 6 times as much per hour worked today as he did in 1911, and he works less than half as many hours—40 instead of 84.
- 6. In other words, even though we all don't end up as presidents and we all don't go into business for ourselves, the American economic system is still just as important to all of us. For each man's standard of living depends directly on what he can produce. And our American system has so encouraged the introduction of new tools and techniques that, year after year, the average American has been able to produce more and more and thereby continue to improve his standard of living.
