Africa Added To Training Area Of U. S. Air Force

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21—(AP)—The United States Global Airforce, already operating in Europe and the Far East, is adding another continent to its training ground—Africa.

B-29 Superfortresses taking off from American-used bases in England and Germany now are winging down to Accra, a British colony on the Gold Goast of Africa.

The airfield was built originally by the British, primarily for commercial operation. With America's entry into World War II, the Air Transport Command developed the base as one unit in the ferry route to the Middle East and Southeast Asia.

Air Force Headquarters said today there is no United States military installation at Accra now. The Superforts use facilities there for refueling on their training excursions down to the Gulf of Guinea, then turn around and head back. Under the present training program, the B-29s do not continue south or east to other warbuilt fields in Africa.

The new training operation began about a week ago. Its aim is to familiarize present day air crews with conditions in a part of the world proved by World War II to be vital to the United States.

The runway at Accra is understood to be 7,300 feet long. This is ample for the B-29s and such transports as the C-54. But it is not clear whether heavier aircraft now being used or built by the United States Air Force could operate from the field.

Runway length is not so much of a factor as the thickness of paving. A B-36 weighs 278,000 pounds loaded; a B-29 only 105,000 pounds.

The distance to the Gold Coast from England—where three groups of B-29s are now based—is about 4,400 miles. The B-29 training route takes the planes over France, down across the western rim of North Africa. For refueling purposes, the American bombers stop at Roberts Field, Libya, or at the Franch-operated base at Daker.

In returning, the route extends northwestward to the Azores (where United States planes land under an agreement with Portugal), thus getting in more overwater experience for pilots and navigators.

Injunction In Picketing Case Assailed

Demurrer Asks Change In Judge for Dispute Involving Hotel Grand

Charges that Circuit Judge Carl E. Wimberly had no authority to issue a temporary restraining order enjoining the picketing of the Hotel Grand were set forth in a demurrer filed Monday to the complaint brought by C. D. Albright and Alice M. Albright and Paul K. Ryan and Helen D. Ryan, doing business as the Hotel Grand, against the alleged pickets, Vera Story, Ellen Arthur, Rose Lund and Mabel Hansen.

Judge Wimberly issued the temporary restraining order Oct. 9 and it was served the same day against the defendants. The defendants formerly employes of the hotel, allegedly were "fired because we want more than 65 cents per hour," their picket banner carried Friday, Oct. 8, and Saturday morning, Oct. 9, stated.

Attorneys for the defendants have filed an application for a change of judge in the suit, a motion to dissolve and to vacate the temporary injunction and in opposition to the granting of the permanent injunction and affidavits by each of the defendants in the suit.

The papers filed not only allege that the Judge had no authority to act, but that the statute under which the temporary injunction has been granted and the permanent injunction sought is "unconstitutional."

The defendants' demurrer is filed on the grounds the "court has no jurisdiction over the parties or the subject matter of the action;" that the "complaint does not state sufficient facts to constitute a cause of suit;" that the "court has no jurisdiction of the subject matter or sufficient facts upon which a temporary or permanent injunction may be premised for the reason that the complaint fails to show a compliance with the requirements of Oregon Laws, Vol. VII, Section 102-813, to 102-825, inclusive;" that the "complaint alleges no allegations of the commitment, either past or threatened, of unlawful acts of these defendants which the court has power to enjoin."

The demurrer further alleges that "on the face of the complaint and based on the record on file in this case it appears that a labor dispute now exists and has existed between the defendants and the plaintiffs, involving wages, hours, working conditions and representation, and for this reason the court is without jurisdiction in the above-entitled matter to issue any temporary or permanent injunction.

"That any temporary or permanent injunction, issued by this court or attempted to be issued by this court, would be void for the reason that all of the acts which the said temporary injunction attempts to enjoin and all of the acts which plaintiffs allege in their complaint are acts which are lawful under the Constitution and laws of the state of Oregon, and the Constitution of the United States; that particularly said acts, as set forth in said complaint, are lawful and protected by the 'due process clause' of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, and Section 20, Article 1, of the constitution of the State of Oregon; that particularly the said temporary injunction and any temporary or permanent injunction which might be issued by this court conflicts with the guarantees of free speech, press and assembly embodies in the afore-mentioned constitution of the United States and the Constitution of the Sate of Oregon."

The motion to dissolve and to vacate the temporary injunction issued Oct. 9 and in opposition to the granting of any permanent injunction, alleges "that the temporary injunction is void and of no effect whatsoever as the same does not contain a provision that a hearing shall be held thereon within five days from the date of issuance thereof.

The motion further alleges "the temporary injunction was issued without making any determination or finding of fact or law that the within case grew out of or involved any labor dispute.

"That the said temporary injunction was issued without requiring of the plaintiffs adequate security sufficient to recompense those enjoined for any loss, expense or damage caused by the improvident or erroneous issuance of such injunction including all reasonable costs together with a reasonable attorneys fee, and expense of a defense against the order oragainst the granting of any injunctive relief sought in the same proceeding and subsequently denied by the court.

"The statute under which apparently the temporary injunction has been granted and the permanent injunction is sought and to be obtained is unconstitutional as a violation of the 'due process clause' of the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States, and Section 20, Article 1, of the Constitution of the State of Oregon, for the reason that such statute abrogates the right of free speech and freedom of assembly of the defendants herein appearing, and further that said statute above-named is unconstitutional for the reason that it is so vague, indefinite and uncertain as to meaning that the things and matters therein sought to be prohibited are not capable of reasonable ascertainment and therefore a violation of the constitutional provisions of the State of Oregon and of the United States, as hereinbefore stated."

The affidavits of the four defendants are filed to show a labor dispute exists, and that "the conduct of these defendants and each of them is conduct guaranteed under the Constitution of the State of Oregon and of the United States," he motion asserts.

Forester Named On Conservation

SEATTLE, Oct. 21—(AP)—The appointment of William A. Tinney of Sedro-Woolley as forester on the staff of the joint committee on forest conservation was announced today by the West Coast Lumbermen's Association and Pacific Northwest Loggers Association.

He will handle the Committee's tree farm and general forestry program for the state from Seattle headquarters. Tinney received a master's degree in forestry from the University of Washington in 1942 and helped organize the Washington Forest Products Co-op Association of Snohomish County.

MILL YARD OILED

During the past few weeks, a considerable section of the mill yard at the Bridge Lumber Co., in Reedsport has been filled with gravel and given an oiled surface, extending the former mill-yard parallel with the switch track that serves the mill.

Clinic For Tax Employes Dated At Grants Pass

An in-service training course for employes of the county tax department and assessor's office will be held at Grants Pass Nov. 29-30 and Dec. 1 under direction of the State Tax Commission. The five Southwestern Oregon counties including Douglas, will participate in the three-day meet.

Five other similar gatherings will be held in various parts of the state beginning Nov. 15, State Tax Commissioner Wallace S. Wharton announced at Salem. The counties to take part in the sectional meeting at Grants Pass include Douglas, Coos, Curry, Jackson, and Josephine counties.

Each session will be of three days' duration. The first day will be devoted to lectures by the traveling faculty, while second and third-day programs provide for class field appraisal of a business property, a city residential property and farm. Each appraisal will be followed by a critique conducted by a technical expert from the assessment and taxation division of the state tax commission.

This year's course has been built around the new manual of appraisal methods for taxation.

County judges and commissioners have been invited to attend the session. Wharton will preside.

Rival Unions In Clash Over Cargo

SEATTLE, Oct. 21—(AP)—Tension between AFL and CIO maritime unions in the Pacific Northwest was increased today by a brisk exchange over the handling of cargo at Vancouver, B. C., and New Westminister.

A circular distributed by the maritime trades department of the AFL charged that striking CIO longshoremen are handling "diverted" cargo at Vancouver while criticizing non-striking AFL stevedores for working such cargo at Tacoma.

William Gettings, regional CIO longshore head, retorted the only ships being worked at Vancouver are those originally intended for that port. He said the AFL has refused a CIO offer to pay the expenses of AFL observers to Vancouver to verify the statement.
