First Flowers Of Spring Come From Minor Bulb

Spring flowering bulbs play a most important part in the "succession of bloom" which can be so planned as to provide flowers in the garden for many months. Bulbs give the earliest garden flowers, and dominate garden displays in early spring.

The first flower to open when the ground begins to thaw in spring is the snowdrop or galanthus. Its tiny white flowers are scarcely an inch across with petals spread out, but a clump of twenty-five peeping through the snow is truly beautiful to winter-weary eyes. Plant them in a group, never in a row, placed where they can be seen from a nearby window.

Scillas and chinodoxas, both blue, are next to bloom, much earlier than violets. They really carpet the ground with color, and like our climate and soil. Both will spread from seed dropped each spring, so start your first plantings where there is room to expand. Remember these early flowers come before there are any leaves, and may be planted close to shrubs, or in border spaces where taller neighbors, later in the season, would hide them.

Crocuses, Daffodils

Crocuses bloom before the daffodils; and they should be planted in groups; never in rows, and never in grass which will be mowed. The foliage of all bulbs must be allowed to turn yellow and dry up before the bulbs are lifted. If the leaves are cut off while still green the bulb cannot mature. Crocuses give us blue and yellow flowers which look well together, and may be combined in many pleasing patterns.

The first daffodils come after the crocuses, and then the hyacinths, early tulips and finally the tall, late tulips, which usually blossom two weeks before the irises, and are capable of a color display which cannot be surpassed the remainder of the year.

It is a mistake to plant only daffodils and tulips, and neglect the smaller but earlier flowers; they may not make a spectacular showing to impress garden visitors, but the spiritual uplift which their appearance will bring to you next March or April, will be one of your most satisfying garden experiences.

The word stevedore comes from the Spanish word estivador meaning packer.

The worst hardship case: a 35-year-old grandfather, hunting a home for himself, wife, daughter and two grandchildren while he attends the university.

LEBANON, Ore. —(AP)—The Odd Fellows Hall, oldest landmark on Lebanon's main street, is going to disappear.

The hall, built in 1876, has become so decrepit the lodge voted to raze it and erect a new building four times larger.
