

Gene Rambo Wins

Top Rodeo Title

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 8.—(P)—A good rest on his home ranch at Shandon, Calif., was all that Gene Rambo hankered after today. He had $3,250 in his jeans, a trophy saddle and a fancy, jeweled gold and silver belt buckle as the 1948 all-around champion cowboy of the International Rodeo Association.

Rambo was awarded the championship as the Grand National Livestock Show and Rodeo ended last night.

The roundup here was designated as the L. R. A. finals for a long string of arena shows throughout the west. Points are awarded on the basis of one for each dollar of prize money won. Barney Willis, White Salmon, Wash., was runnerup to Rambo. Sonny Tureman, John Day, Ore., won the bareback bronc riding championship, with $1,000.

In steer wrestling Barney Willis won the belt buckle and $1,250. Everett Shaw, Stonevill, Okla., won $1,250 for the steer roping championship.

Buck Sorrels, Tucson, Ariz., won the calf roping championship, worth $1,250.

Carl Olson, Carleton, Alberta, Canada, took the saddle bronc riding championship of the L. R. A. Gene Pruitt, Yakima, Wash., was second. The top award was worth $1,000.

New Party Leader Is Sought by Republicans

Michigan, Rep. Clarence Brown of Ohio is mentioned among House members.

Governors who might be regarded now as available for one of the top spots on the ticket four years hence include Alfred E. Driscoll of New Jersey, Ernest W. Gibson of Vermont, Luther W. Youngdahl of Minnesota and Frank Carlson of Kansas.

While most of the new crop of Republican hopefuls hold public office, Stassen has perhaps as good a forum as any of them in his presidency of the University of Pennsylvania. His understanding with the university is that he is to have a free hand to engage in politics.

Stassen's appeal to many Republicans lies largely in their belief that he has widespread influence among younger voters.

It was this asset, more than any other, which was said to have led Dewey to forget some of Stassen's pre-convention cracks and invite his former opponent to take an active part in the campaign.

Columbia River Basin Development Mapped stream plants at a cost of $53,880,000.

Build transmission lines linking the entire system at a cost of $42,600,000.

Improve river channels and harbors at a cost of $3,650,000.

Build new and extend existing irrigation projects at a cost of $273,324,000.

Relocate and rehabilitate salmon runs to the lower Columbia at a cost of $20,000,000.

Complete the Willamette Valley 20-dam development plan in Western Oregon at a cost of $390,746,000 to the federal government and $41,141,000 to local governments.

Provide flood protection and other improvements in local sub-basin areas at a federal cost of $29,155,000 and local cost of $2,072,000.

On the basis of January, 1948, estimates, the total for all basin development would cost $3,030,475,000.

Flood Control Listed

Col. Weaver summarized the results of the program when completed in this way:

Flood damage such as that experienced in June would be virtually eliminated; the installed and integrated regional power system would be 11,700,000 kilowatts; barge navigation on the Columbia and Snake Rivers would reach to Lime Point, Idaho; new water would pour onto 500 square miles of now arid land and supplemental water would be provided many more thousands of acres; fisheries would develop on the basis of lower valley fish runs.

The plan calls for seven dams in addition to those already authorized: 1, Libby on the Kootenai nal River, Montana, to cost $239,077,000; 2, Glacier View on Flathead River, Mont., $94,962,500 (but contingent on approval by the Secretary of the Interior); 3, Alberti Falls, Pend Oreille River, Idaho, $31,070,000; 4, Priest Rapids, Columbia River, Wash., $326,124,000; 5, Hell's Canyon, Snake River, Idaho and Oregon, $342,076,000; 6, John Day, Columbia River, Wash., and Oregon, $378,226,000; 7, The Dalles, Columbia River, Wash., and Oregon, $286,286,000.

All of the seven dams would have power units. All but The Dalles would aid in flood control. All but Priest Rapids would have navigation features. The Dalles and John Day dams would aid irrigation.

Grand Coulee dam's outlet would be modified for flood control at a cost of $250,000.

Irrigation Provided For

Irrigation projects endorsed by the Bureau of Reclamation are the Bitterroot Valley, including Woodside unit, and Missoula Valley north side unit on Montana; upper Star Valley project in Wyoming; Mountain Home-Payette unit, Cambridge Bench, Council and Mann Creek projects in Idaho; Canby, Crooked River, Vale-Bully Creek extension and The Dalles west unit in Oregon and the Yakima-Kennecook division project in Washington.

The Willamette Valley plan, announced several months ago, calls for 20 multiple-purpose projects, five of which have been built or are under construction.

Relatively small sub-basin projects, including those previously recommended would cost $29,155,000. New projects include Bonners Ferry on the Kootenai River, Idaho; Clarke Fork, Mont.; Yakima River, Wash.; Columbia and minor tributaries above and below Yakima; upper, central and middle and lower Snake Rivers areas in Wyoming and Idaho.

Col. Weaver noted that since Congress requires irrigation projects to be self liquidating, the costs above what farmers can pay might be met by adding 60 cents a kilowatt to the power cost. He made the suggestion without recommendation.

He explained that since both the irrigation and the power are essential to regional development, the payment from power would be a regional subsidy rather than a national allotment to the region.

Two other compensation suggestions were included: One would provide for annual payments to the states where local governments lose tax revenues because of the projects; Indians would be provided new fishing grounds or given other compensation for the loss of traditional rights.

Revision in Income Tax Cut Truman's Plan percentage saving big for low-income people but tiny for those in the high brackets.

The President estimated the cost of his plan at $3,200,000,000. He proposed that amount be made up by an excess profits tax.

In any event, the White House has sent word around to the various government departments that they will have to contend with "a hard-boiled policy."

Budget Director James E. Webb told reporters about it after a talk with Mr. Truman last Saturday. He said he and the President went over fund requests for 16 departments and agencies, and in most cases decided to hold the amounts below those Congress voted for this year.

Webb did not say which agencies were involved, but he did make clear that the military services were not among them. Largely because of stepped-up defense planning, there have been predictions that next year's budget may run some $3,000,000,000 above the $42,000,000,000 outlay projected for the present government year ending next June 30.

not clear in his mind, after he had made considerable study. He said that if it were merely a matter of electing councilmen no court would throw the election out, but since matters of taxation and bonding would be involved there might be a difference. He said it might be possible to have the State Legislature at its next session validate the election.

Representative Robert C. Gile, who was present, said unofficially he would hesitate to ask the Legislature to validate an election in which only 12 votes separated the affirmative and negative votes.

City Attorney Paul Geddes, not present at the meeting, had stated on Thursday he did not believe the election would stand up in a court test.

Election Preferred

Mayor Flegel expressed the opinion the council should either abide by the city attorney's decision or call in outside legal advice. The councilmen voting on the ordinance did so on the basis that it would be better to have the matter cleared up by a second election than to face problems which might arise, if the election were certified.

The election Dec. 10 will have to be conducted in both the city and in West Roseburg. The hours, designated by the city charter for all-city election, will be between 9 a. m. and 6 p. m. The date set was recommended by the city attorney in order to allow the time legally required for advertising an election.

Stolen Roseburg Auto Found; Two Youths Held

State Police Sgt. Lyle Harrell today reported that a sedan registered to Lester Flory, Roseburg, was recovered at Vancouver, Washington, Saturday. The car had been reported stolen on Friday. Two 16-year-old Seattle youths were arrested with the car, which was reported as undamaged. Whether or not the youths will be returned here to face charges is up to the juvenile authorities, Sgt. Harrell said.

Woman Burns to Death Fighting Fire in Rug

PORTLAND, Nov. 8.—(P)—A housewife was burned to death yesterday while attempting to put out a rug fire believed caused by a cigarette.

The coroner's office said Willamena E. Macomber, 50, apparently collapsed while trying to beat out the fire started on a rug. Her clothing then was ignited but the rug fire burned itself out.

Her body was discovered when her husband returned home after an afternoon of playing golf.

Indictment Hits Congressman Thomas

He added he might have a statement later.

The committee headed by Thomas was in the spotlight throughout the year in its investigations into Communist and subversive activities during and since the war.

Re-Elected Last Tuesday

Thomas was re-elected last Tuesday. However, he will lose his chairmanship when Democrats take control of Congress in January.

The conspiracy was alleged to have run from Jan. 1, 1940, to Jan. 30, 1945.

Miss Campbell was accused only of the alleged conspiracy. Thomas was charged with conspiracy and also with a series of overt acts in the filing of allegedly false claims.

Court officials said that conviction on all the charges against Thomas would carry a possible maximum sentence of 32 years in prison, $40,000 in fines, or both.

George Morris Fay, U. S. district attorney, said the court was notified that Thomas will appear Tuesday of next week for arraignment.

Fay said the trial, under normal procedures, could not take place before January.

The indictment charges Thomas with 34 "overt acts," that is specific instances of wrongdoing.

W. Singleton Grateful For Flowers, Cards

Walter Singleton of Roseburg, who recently underwent major surgery at Murphy Memorial hospital in Whittier, Calif., writes to the News-Review asking that his thanks be conveyed to the many friends who have sent him flowers, letters and cards during his illness.

He reports he is making good recovery and has been moved from the hospital, where he was a patient for 17 days, to the home of his granddaughter, Mrs. Marjorie Mitchell, 624 Wilbur Place, Montebello, Calif. He expects to leave soon to visit at the home of his son, Wallace Singleton, in Banning, Calif.

Pilot, Passenger Die In Crash at Port Orford

PORT ORFORD, Ore., Nov. 3.—(P)—The crash of a light plane here yesterday was fatal to pilot Robert Repass and his passenger, Robert Irwin, both of Coquille.

State police reported Repass, who recently obtained his private pilot's license, rented the plane from Pacific Airways at North Bend.

The plane went into a dive from 500 feet altitude soon after taking off here.

Two Killed, Three Hurt When Autos Collide

PORTLAND, Nov. 8.—(P)—Two men were killed and three injured yesterday in a two-car collision at an intersection east of the city.

James Robert Hill, 20, Oklahoma City, and Paul M. Neilson, 38, Portland, passengers in different cars, were killed.

Hill was a passenger with Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Sodaro, Portland. Sodaro was badly injured but his wife was not critically hurt. Vincent Brown, 23, Portland, escaped serious harm. He was driving the second auto.

Slayer Executed After Marriage in Prison

BELLEFONTE, PA., Nov. 8.—(P)—David P. Taranow, 23-year-old convicted slayer who was married in a prison ceremony last Friday, died in the electric chair early today.

Taranow was driven to the central Pennsylvania prison here last night after spending a 10-hour honeymoon holding hands with his bride—Stella Moto of Brooklyn, N. Y.—in the warden's office at Broadmeadows Prison, Media, Pa., where they were married.

The ceremony was performed by a prison guard who is also a justice of the peace. Present were Taranow's parents and his nine-month-old daughter, child of the girl he married.

Taranow, a New Yorker, was sentenced to die in the electric chair for the holdup-slaying of Francis L. Devon, July 9, 1947. A three-judge court said the slaying was "coldly planned" and "coldly executed" by Taranow who had been picked up by Devon as a hitchhiker.
