United Nations to Carry on Despite 12 Weeks of Slim Accomplishments

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press Foreign Affairs Analyst

The United Nations General Assembly has concluded a torrid 12-week Paris session with results which, in the main, are of questionable concrete value.

Millions of words have poured over the dam without turning any mill wheels to grind the grist for which peace minded folk are hungering.

Much of this torrent of language has been devoted to the bitter warfare between the Soviet bloc and the anti-Communist countries. This reached its peak Saturday when Andrei Y. Vishinsky, the Russian delegate, hurled at his former allies the awful charge:

"The cause of the second World War is not so much Hitler, but the leaders of France and Britain, supported by the U.S.A."

That was the note on which the assembly adjourned, with the blocs apparently further apart than ever. It is this dangerous division which presumably impelled British Foreign Secretary Bevin to say during a speech in Parliament the other day:

"The United Nations is giving us grave concern as to whether it is going to face up to grave problems at all."

Mr. Bevin was voicing the thoughts of observers in general. So long as the world is divided into two hostile blocs, and those blocs are sharply reflected in the United Nations, how can we expect the peace organization to function properly?

'Cold War' Is Handicap

The answer, as I see it, is that the U. N. will remain largely ineffectual so long as the ideological "cold war" continues. You might as well expect the general staffs of two warring nations to get together and agree on military operations as to expect that those U. N. blocs can cooperate.

That is an unhappy conclusion, but I don't believe it means we must abandon the U. N. without further trial. The establishment of the peace organization is evidence of the great ideal which good men have been pursuing for centuries.

Mrs. F. D. R. Sets Example

So I take it we must carry on. As a matter of fact, who would want to do anything else in view of the example set by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, who announced in Paris that she plans to devote the rest of her life to the U. N. as "the best hope we have for peace."

"We may slide into war," she says, "but we must support the United Nations. It may yet save civilization from the terrible setback of another war."

That sturdy declaration comes from the chairman of the United Nations Human Rights Commission. She is one of the chief creators of the declaration of human rights which has just been completed after two and a half years of labor.

It is one of the great documents of all time and, while this far it is merely a statement of principles, the commission will see next year to draft a treaty enforcing these sweeping rights.

The Soviet bloc has bottled this work all the way, and tried to prevent its adoption at the finish. Communism doesn't believe in individual human rights. So Mrs. F. D. R., having gone through this harrowing experience, can still pledge the rest of her life to the United Nations, who are we to withhold support for further trial (perhaps involving some reorganization) of the U. N.?

Swede Discovers New Wool Washing Method

STOCKHOLM — (AP) — A demonstrator at the Swedish Textile Research Institute at Costeborg, civil engineer Joel Lindborg, has invented a new method to wash raw wool, which is claimed to be far better than the older methods.

Hitherto the washing has been a damaging process. The wool felted easily in the strong lye and that made the following carding difficult and hard on the fibres. After washing with the new method the carding machines can work 30-40 per cent faster than before and with better results. The fibres can be kept 20 to 25 per cent greater in length.

Another gain by the new method is that it makes it easier to extract valuable materials from the lye. Every ton of raw wool gives now 100 kilogram or more of high quality lanolin which is used for cosmetics and pharmaceutical preparations.

But the raw wool is not only fat, it is also salty from the sweat of the sheep, and from this saltiness can be extracted potash. Sweden imports both potash and lanolin. The new wash method will make the whole import of lanolin unnecessary as long as the import of raw wool is as large as now.
