After every shampoo, Your nails you should do. That's pretty corny poetry but seriously, the very best time to give yourself a manicure is right after you've shampooed your hair. The cuticle is easy to work with because it's soft from the shampoo. Also the manicuring job makes a good time filler while your hair is drying. Don't try to file and shape the nails at the time however, as they will be too soft. Shape them with an emery board before the shampoo and remember, if your nails have a tendency to split, draw the board across the nail from corner to center only. Don't draw the board back and forth.
