Dry hair is a real problem—ask the woman who owns one. Hot oil treatments before a shampoo usually help and a little oil dressing worked into the hair with a brush will aid in bringing the wild tresses under control. Thorough brushing is in itself a good treatment for dry hair when it is done properly. The brushes should be drawn across the scalp and then, with a slow stroke, clear to the ends of the hair. In this way the natural scalp oils will be distributed through the hair.
