Here's a trick you might like to try next time you shampoo your hair—especially if dandruff is a problem. Use a small nail brush to scrub the scalp. After you've worked up a good lather, part the strands of hair into small bunches and get down to the scalp with the brush. Pay particular attention to the front of your hair where it grows up from the forehead. This operation is beneficial to the scalp and dandruff seems to take a little longer in showing up again when the brush has been used.
