You can lunch lightly after church on Sunday, and piek up a pint or quart of delicious home made ice cream in your favorite flavor, for dessert with your late-afternoon dinner. The band concerts in the city park will soon be starting—there's your excuse for an early-evening walk with the children, and a chance to enjoy good music without having to dig up the price of a ticket. Then you can walk on up the street to the Ice Creamery for a bedlime treat all around—and what child won't thrive on companionship like that?

while your pressure canner is working, you can sit and enjoy a book from MILLER'S RENTAL LIBRARY, like the one we read this week: "Be Still, My Love," by June Truesdell. This is the book that was made into a movie which was shown here a week or so ago, "The Accused," with Loretta Young as the psychology teacher who murdered a student. The writing is awkward in spots, but the plot is well handled in general and cleverly brought to its logical conclusion, Miller's have a suggestion for Father's Day gifting, too—Father's Ideals, with lovely colored reproductions of outdoor paintings and sailing or hunting pictures. Edgar Guest is represented with a poem, "When Dad Comes Home," and another feature is an illustrated poem, "We Go To The Circus." That's a timely theme. The price of Father's Ideals is only $1.25, too.
