

German-Author Book Says Hitler Murdered Pregnant Niece To Hush Love Affair

By HERMAN M. TIMM

FRANKFURT, Germany, June 17 — (AP) — A new German book published in Germany alleges that Hitler killed his niece, Angela Raubal, in 1932 after he learned that she was to become the mother of his child.

The book is a biography of Fritz Michael Gerlich, German newspaper publisher who died in Dachau concentration camp in 1934 for opposing the Nazis.

Author of the book is Baron Erwein von Aretin, a close acquaintance of Gerlich.

Baron von Aretin claims that Gerlich knew of Hitler's guilt. He says Gerlich passed his knowledge to another Dachau prisoner who survived.

But the prisoner who is supposed to have received the story from Gerlich is not named. And no documentary evidence to support the murder charge is contained in the book.

Sensational rumors about Hitler's alleged love affair with his pretty young Austrian niece have circulated in Germany for many years.

Officially, her death was listed as suicide.

However, Baron von Aretin charges in his book that the Nazis suppressed the true facts of the case and sent to concentration camps all persons who had knowledge of it.

Dr. Wilhelm Frick, Hitler's minister of the interior who was hanged at Nuernberg for war crimes, was said to have handed the suppression of the police records of the girl's death.

Hitler Squelches Probe

Hitler was not yet in power when his niece died. But the book says his power in Bavaria was already enough to force Munich Police to drop their investigation and to list Angela's death as suicide. News stories about it were suppressed.

According to the book Hitler shot Angela Raubal in his Munich flat in 1932. But it does not describe the shooting or name any witnesses.

The book says the girl's piano teacher knew of the murder—and died in the same concentration camp as Gerlich. The piano teacher is not named. Nor is it related how he learned of the shooting.

It is an unchallenged fact that the 25-year-old daughter of Hitler's half-sister, had been living in Hitler's home since 1928. She attended the University of Munich, and was his companion at many social events.

Wedding Prevented

At one time she was engaged to marry Emil Maurice, Hitler's personal chauffeur and No. 2 man in his Elite Corps, the SS.

Maurice told the Associated Press a year ago that Hitler ordered Angela to break the engagement and threatened to quit supporting her and her mother if she did not obey. She obeyed.

"He was very jealous of her," said Maurice, now in a Nazi internment camp.

But Maurice said he knows nothing about the circumstances of her death because he parted with Hitler after quarreling with him about his interference with his romance.

Maurice, like many Germans, doubts that Hitler ever had physical love affairs with any woman.

Even his publicized romance with Eva Braun is still believed by many Germans to have been "purely platonic."
