

Further Delay In Mobilization Of Resources Could Be Dangerous

By BRUCE BLOSSAT

Bernard Baruch, 77-year-old adviser to presidents, had some blunt advice for President Truman the other day. It was this: Get a plan for total mobilization in event of war, and get it fast.

The elder statesman largely blamed the President for the fact that "with the cold war dragging into its fourth year, we still lack any effective plan for the swiftest possible mobilization of our resources to insure reaching our Allies in time."

Any further delay, Baruch said, would be a "needless gamble with our national security, a needless invitation to disaster."

Baruch speaks with authority in this field. In World War I, he headed the War Industries Board, an agency comparable to the War Production Board in the recent war. His experience and wisdom as a mobilizer of resources were put to frequent use during World War II.

Baruch, in a commencement address before the Industrial College of the Armed Forces, pointed out that a National Security Resources Board was created by Congress to develop standby plans for industry in case of war.

"When this agency attempted to act, it was, as you know, prevented from doing so," he said. "It has still to be heard from."

Baruch explained later to a reporter that he had reference at that point to a mobilization plan actually drafted by the Resources Board but turned down by Mr. Truman.

The administration denied any plan ever won full board approval or was considered by the President.

But even if Baruch should prove wrong on this score, the administration's statement amounts to a confession of inaction that supports his main complaint.

Moreover, several months ago the board chairman, Arthur M. Hill, resigned and has not been replaced. The President did nominate Mon C. Wallgren, his old Senate enemy and former Democratic governor of Washington, to the post. But he canceled the nomination at Wallgren's request after a Senate committee shelved the appointment.

It seems to us the President's duty is to choose a suitable head for the Resources Board at the earliest moment. Even allowing for the normal difficulties of luring competent men into government service these days, we think too much time has elapsed without satisfactory board leadership.

When he names a man, Mr. Truman should encourage him to proceed forthwith to weld a mobilization program for the congressional action.

By the same token, Congress,

Vets Should Tell VA Promptly Of Address Changes

Each month an average of 80,000 veterans or their dependents fail to receive their checks promptly because no notice was given the Veterans Administration that they had moved to another address, the VA reports.

Leaving a forwarding address with the post office will not suffice, the VA said. Under the law, no government checks may be forwarded. They are returned to the Treasury Department and remain there until the VA provides that agency with a new address.

Veterans receiving monetary benefits from the VA who are moving to a new location, should go to the nearest VA office and fill out a "change of address" form. If a personal call is impossible, a letter should be mailed to the VA office handling the case, giving the new address and complete information for identification purposes.

All veterans holding G. I. Insurance should also notify the VA of any change of address. The easiest way to accomplish this is to fill out the space provided for that purpose in the return envelope the VA sends out as a premium notice.

Spray Now For Filbert Moth, Growers Urged

Filbert moths are emerging according to entomologists at the Oregon State College experiment station. Local growers are advised to apply control measures prior to July 14 as eggs laid by the emerging moths will hatch in about eight days.

Lead arsenate, used at the rate of three pounds to 100 gallons of water, plus a spreader or a 40 percent lead arsenate dust is recommended. DDT may also be used either as a spray or dust in controlling filbert worms. The spray is used at the rate of two pounds of 50 percent wettable DDT powder to 100 gallons of water. A five percent DDT dust at a rate of 40 to 50 pounds per acre is also recommended. Where DDT is used, it is suggested that the ground beneath the trees be well sprayed or dusted to kill the moths as they emerge from the ground.

Regardless of what insecticide is used, thoroughness of application is necessary, states J. Roland Parker, county extension agent. Upper portions of the tree should be thoroughly covered with either spray or dust.

You can make peanut candy at home quickly by adding a cup of sugar over low heat, stirring as you do so, then adding a cup of chopped peanuts.
