Sworn-Off Smokers Schedule Convention

SPOKANE, July 9—(AP)—It may get steaming hot at Hot Lake, Ore., next month, but it won't get smoking hot.

Not if Nicotine Unlimited can help it.

That's a national organization of people who have sworn off smoking. It will hold a convention at Hot Lake August 27 and 28.

J. D. Lewis of Pullman, grand secretary, said the most important thing about the convention is the chance it will give members to meet each other.

Apparently they enjoy watching each other keep from smoking.

But it may get steaming hot. "Several baths in the wonderful water at the hot springs," Lewis said, "would remove the last traces of nicotine and the other 19 poisons in tobacco for those beginners on the way to completely ridding their systems of the poison."

They say this would more than eat up any gain they might expect to make in selling us more of their products at a lower price.

Another reason they don't want to devalue is that they borrowed about $4 billion from us, or one billion pounds, at the rate of $4 to the pound. They are supposed to start repaying that in a couple of years. If they repay in $3 pounds, it would take not just one billion pounds to repay that $4 billion loan, but 1,333,333,333 pounds. In other words, by devaluing they would be increasing their debt to us by a third of a billion pounds.

Manufacturers Concerned How about Americans? If the British devalue, Americans could expect to pay less for Scotch whisky and British woollens, at least until the cost of making them goes up.

But U. S. manufacturers could expect stiffer competition from the British here, and at a time when many factories are finding it harder to sell their own goods either here or abroad. There probably would be a renewed drive for higher U. S. tariffs to protect American manufacturers.

American exporters could expect to find it harder to place American goods abroad if similar British goods were offered at a lower price ratio to the dollar than the present.

England says no, it won't revalue. But skeptical Americans say it may have to, because they claim the $4 rate is purely artificial right now. They point out that you can go into the "free market" and get the pound at what traders think it is worth—around $3. Only about 10 per cent of British exports, foreign traders estimate, is paid for now in these $3 pounds. British trade restrictions see to it that 90 per cent is paid for in $4 pounds.

These are some of the things Snyder and Cripps may be thinking about as they discuss England's troubles.

Third U. S. Newsman Is Barred By Indo-China

Roth came from Hong Kong with his wife, who is a correspondent of Dutch newspapers in Batavia. Both had regular passports with regular visas from the French consulate in Hong Kong.

Roth is the third American correspondent recently refused admittance in Indo-China by French authorities. The first two were Walter Briggs, correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor, and Harold Isaacs of Newsweek.

Marry At Pretty Home Wedding

Mr. and Mrs. James La Raut

The new home of Mrs. Villa La Raut on East Douglas St. was the scene of a very pretty wedding Saturday evening, June 25, when James LaRaut and Margaret Topping repeated their vows before an altar of greenery, white hydrangeas and blue delphinium. Dr. Morris H. Roach, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, performed the ceremony.

Preceding the service, Mrs. Gilbert Wrenn of Minneapolis sang, "I Love You Truly."

A reception for the immediate members of the family followed the ceremony. A beautiful three-tiered ice cream wedding cake was made and served by the bridegroom's sister, Mrs. Ellis Bartram of Horns Super Cream.

Mr. and Mrs. LaRaut are now at home to their friends at the LaRaut ranch in Garden Valley.

Britain Struggling Hard To Keep Her Pound Sterling On Parity With Four U. S. Dollars

By SAM DAWSON

NEW YORK, July 9.—(AP)—TOP brass in the American and British treasuries met yesterday as pressure grew to get Britain to toss in the towel in her fight to keep the pound sterling worth four American dollars.

Treasury Secretary Snyder and Chancellor of the Exchequer Cripps discussed Cripps' recent order to British to stop buying American goods as far as possible. America's Economic Cooperation Administrator Hoffman says that order means a quarter of a billion dollar loss a year to American exporters—and that's not exactly chickenfeed.

Meanwhile many here are betting that England will make the pound officially worth only three dollars, perhaps by early fall. But Hoffman says that such devaluation would be a "quick shot in the arm" which you might not "want to take because of the after effects."

What are these after effects? Who would gain by devaluation, who would lose, both in the United States and Britain?

Much of the pressure to get the British to lower the value they put on their money comes from those who buy British goods. An American who now pays 100 dollars for a British product, with the pound officially pegged at $4, theoretically would pay only 75 dollars for the same product if the pound were cut to $3. Actually, it wouldn't work out quite that simply.

When a nation devalues its currency, there's a tendency for its products to rise in price. For one thing, the raw materials it imports cost it more in its own newly-devalued money. For example, it takes 25 pounds now to buy $100 worth of American machinery. It would take the British manufacturer 33 pounds to buy the same machine if the pound were cut to $3.

Why Britain Objects For another thing, as the price of the food and other things England imports goes up, workers will ask more wages—and production costs will go up again. The price of British goods will rise again, and the American will pay much more than 75 dollars he expects for the British product now priced at $100.

The main reason the British don't want to cut the value of their money in relation to ours, is that they are buying more from us than they are selling to us. What they need from us would cost them more in pounds. They say this would more than eat up any gain they might expect to make in selling us more of their products at a lower price.

Another reason they don't want to devalue is that they borrowed about $4 billion from us, or one billion pounds, at the rate of $4 to the pound. They are supposed to start repaying that in a couple of years. If they repay in $3 pounds, it would take not just one billion pounds to repay that $4 billion loan, but 1,333,333,333 pounds. In other words, by devaluing they would be increasing their debt to us by a third of a billion pounds.

Truman Hopeful Of Bill For Aid To Education

BOSTON, July 9.—(AP)—President Truman said in a message Thursday that he hopes to sign a "satisfactory" bill for federal aid to education in this session of Congress.

The President sent his message to the annual convention of the National Education Association and said:

"I have repeatedly pledged my support to federal aid to the states in the amount of $300,000,000 annually for the purpose of more nearly equalizing educational opportunities and improving the salaries of our teachers.

"As you know, such an appropriation was provided for in the budget for this year and a bill has been passed by the senate. I fully expect the House Committee and the House, itself, to take early and favorable action on this subject.

"I hope to have the pleasure of signing a satisfactory federal aid bill before the close of the present session of this Congress."
