Tenmile Child, Malformed At Birth, On Way To Health After Corrective Operation

HEALTHY GIRL—Despite an unusual operation shortly after she was born, little Wanda Howard of Tenmile is growing up into a normal, healthy girl. Her case is described in a recent issue of Northwest Medicine.

At 18 months Wanda Howard of Tenmile is a glowing, healthy girl. She had a precarious entry into the world, however, and the circumstances surrounding an unusual operation performed on the infant when she was a few days old are described in a recent issue of Northwest Medicine, published at Seattle.

Wanda's condition was described medically as a congenital diaphragmatic hernia. That means her intestines were pushed into the right side of her chest cavity. There actually was no rupture and the case was classified as "absence of the diaphragm" rather than hernia.

The operation was performed by Dr. J. M. Boyles of Roseburg, who includes his case report with the article in the medical journal. A diagnosis when Wanda was 10 days old showed the colon (large intestine) extending directly from the rectum to the posterior right chest, passing posteriorly to the liver; all the small intestines except the duodenum were in the chest; the stomach was in the abdomen and the liver was below the defective diaphragm.

An oblique incision had been made while the infant was under oxygen ether anesthesia. In the operation, the child's organs were restored to their proper places. The liver and intestines were put back in the abdomen with a great deal of difficulty, the doctor commented in his case report. The incision was then closed in layers with considerable tension. Wanda weighed seven pounds eight ounces when she was born. A picture taken when she was three months old, published in the magazine, shows her as a smiling 15-pound, two-ounce girl. The scar across her chest and stomach is visible. But she has been a normally behaving baby do not know what to do with it." "It is one of the ironies of war that an American is not safe at night on the streets in the Philippines but he can go anywhere in Japan without fear." "All of the Americans of the occupation I asked expressed a genuine liking for Japanese people. They are hard workers, with a fine sense of humor, and clean. Some writers have said that no one knows what the Japanese are really thinking, that perhaps they are two-faced and really do not like Americans, but it is my opinion," said Mr. Travis, "that they do like us."

Green Cabbage Now Plentiful

By GAYNOR MADDOX
NEA Staff Writer
Those green cabbages rolling to market combine deliciously with other foods. The Bureau of Home Economics and Human Nutrition of the Department of Agriculture has experimented. Here are some of their appetizing and thrifty results.

Long-time favorites a mung meat-and-cabbage duets are stuffed cabbage and cabbage rolls. Mexican cabbage rolls are a novel variation of the latter—a mixture of chili con carne and rice wrapped in cabbage leaves and placed in a casserole. On top, add a combination of tomatoes, vinegar, salt, water and brown sugar. Bake in a slow oven (300 degrees F.) for about 30 minutes.

A stuffed cabbage, made "company style," starts with ground meat such as sausage or beef. Brown it with diced onions. While the meat is cooking, cut out the heart of the cabbage and some of the cabbage around the heart, to make a good-sized hole. Chop up the cabbage removed and mix it with toasted bread crumbs. Then add it to the browned meat and onions. Fill the hole in the cabbage with the mixture, salt the cabbage, and set it in a pan with a little hot water and a tight lid. Bake until the cabbage is tender.

Cabbage-Cheese: Cabbage and cheese combinations offer a choice as to type of cheese and method of serving. One of the popular dishes in this category, a tasty, nourishing concoction, combines the cabbage and cheese with spaghetti in a scalloped dish. When you make this, cook less spaghetti than usual. Make a white sauce, and to it add 1-2 pound of cheese shaved thin. Arrange the spaghetti, sauce, and shredded cabbage in layers in a greased baking dish. Cover with a mixture of crumbs and table fat. Bake for 20 to 30 minutes in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.). For cooler eating, use cottage cheese and a salad bowl. Use one head of lettuce or endive, 3 medium carrots, 1 cup of chopped cabbage, 1 1/2 cups of cottage cheese, salt, pepper, salad dressing and one tomato cut in wedges. Shred the lettuce, cut the carrot in tiny, thin strips or shred

Husbands Are So Different, Wife Tells Him In Monotonous Life Drag

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK—(P)—The monotony of modern life sometimes got Wilbur Peeble down.

He felt that way one morning when the alarm clock shrilled him awake. He glanced over at the other twin bed and half-heartedly hoped to see there something to surprise him — perhaps an elephant or a small Shetland pony.

But, as usual, he looked only into the eyes of his wife, Trellis Mae, placidly waiting for him to turn off the alarm. Wilbur did.

"Animals don't have to wake up to an alarm clock," he said. "Why should men? The day I retire I am going to throw that darn thing right through the window."

But, he figured moodily, that would be 30 years from now, and who could say whether he or the alarm clock would wear out first?

When he got to his desk at the office, he looked around. There were at least 50 other desks exactly like his. "Everybody doing the same thing," Wilbur grumbled. He strolled over to the water cooler and filled a paper cup. "Water," he said. "Wonder if there ever really was an office where they put gin in the water cooler?"

At 11:59 Wilbur bolted out the door, grabbed an elevator and managed to get to the drugstore in time to grab a counter seat.

"Malted milk anna ham san'leh," he grumbled. He looked at the man next to him, munching on a sandwich and drinking a malted milk. Wilbur looked the other way. The girl seated on that side was having a sandwich and a malted milk, too. "Everybody even eats the same thing—and at the same time," Wilbur thought in desperation. When he was served, he said: "Do you have any chopsticks? I always eat my sandwich with chopsticks."

"Ha, ha," laughed the soda jerk. "Thassa good one, Wilbur." And so it went all the day—monotony, monotony, monotony. Where Wilbur got home he was it. Combine with other ingredients just before serving. Season and add dressing. Serves 6 to 8.

Two More Bombs Explode In Spain

BARCELONA, Spain, July 18. (P)—Two bombs exploded here last night, one of them killing a man and injuring nine other persons in the city's main square, the Plaza de Cateiuna.

Two large time bombs were discovered early this morning in the largest hotel in Barcelona and removed by artillery officers before any damage was done.

The first bomb last night shattered windows near the square. Two of the nine injured were women who were hurt so critically they were not expected to live. The second smaller bomb exploded several hours later, about three miles from the first. No one was injured. The blast was in a garden near the Pedrales palace, the residence of Generalissimo Francisco Franco when he visited Barcelona last month. There were several bomb blasts during his visit to the city.
