Woman Earns Living Changing Her Hair Color Several Times Daily

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK.—(AP)—Mrs. Mammie Hohnacker is a real odd job lady. She earns a living turning her hair different colors—as many as eight to ten times a day. So far as she knows she is unique in her field.

This chameleon-like existence is her own idea. She thought up the job of color rinse tester herself.

Five years ago she went to work as a technician in the Nestle-Lemur laboratory at Meriden, Conn., which manufactures hair rinses. She was assigned to help mix colors.

Mrs. Hohnacker is something of a perfectionist. After a time she went to her boss and asked: "How can we be absolutely sure we are getting the right shade in each color when we're just mixing chemicals? Why not test each vat of color rinse on real hair? Then we can be certain."

It was pointed out to her that if different models were used the varying texture of their hair would make it difficult for the laboratory experts to maintain exact color standards.

"Then just use one girl," suggested Mrs. Hohnacker.

"Well, I'll volunteer," she said hesitatingly, hardly realizing what this would let her in for.

Since then she has tested some 5,000 vats of color. In each case she applies the rinse to her hair; submits the result to the critical gaze of a chemist, shampoos out that color—and goes on to the next. When a color is imperfect the vat goes down the drain—300 gallons of it.

Getting the color perfect is important as an estimated 85 per cent of American women use a color rinse regularly or occasionally. There are about ten standard colors in the trade.

Woman's Hair is Blend
"Practically no woman is completely satisfied with the color of her hair," said Mrs. Hohnacker. "But her hair isn't actually all one color shade. It's a blend."

"Under a strong microscope you can see ten different shades of color in the average woman's hair. It is always darker at the nape of the neck, for example, than it is around the face line. By the right choice of a color rinse a woman can highlight the shade she prefers."

Mrs. Hohnacker, a slender, expressive mother of two young children, has prematurely graying hair herself.

"I began as a towhead," she said cheerfully, "but now I guess I'm a salt and pepper brunette—and more salt than pepper."

Her work isn't without its social hazards. She has a habit of leaving on overnight the last color rinse tested during the day. But one afternoon, something went wrong and she emerged from the hair dryer to find her tresses a flaming green.

"There wasn't time to do anything," she said. "I had to leave immediately for a dinner engagement. So I marched out, hoping it wouldn't be too noticeable."

Shortly afterward, when she

Floyd Edinger Posts Bail Bond Of $1,000

T. "Bud" Carter. Justice of Peace Fred M. Wright set bail at $1,000 on each charge.
