ASSOCIATED BUSINESS WOMEN'S CLUB HOLDS INTERESTING MEETING

The Associated Business Women's Club met in the basement of the Methodist church Monday evening for a business meeting instead of the usual social night as the regular one fell on the 4th of July and was postponed.

Mrs. Florence Cook, president, was in charge.

The Civic committee reported they were working diligently on their project, but did not have too much to report at this time.

The Flower Show committee reported that plans were shaping up nicely and the show would be held the last week in August; the date to be announced later. There will be all divisions for flowers: a hobby division, best dressed doll division, bird house division, a bazaar and a food booth. Prizes will be awarded in all divisions except the food booth and all persons interested are urged to enter their flowers.

Members present were: Mrs. Betty Correll, Mrs. Dollie Parks, Mrs. Laura Welch, Mrs. Lois Riemenschneider, Mrs. Erma Buck, Mrs. Evelyn Young, Mrs. Leona Slack, Mrs. Lucille Chase, Mrs. Loa Mae Wilson, Mrs. Lucille Chris, Mrs. Lina Torrey, Mrs. Helme Burns, Mrs. Francis Carriger, Mrs. Florence Cook, Mrs. Ivona Halverson, Mrs. Cora Allen, Miss Francis Torrey, Mrs. Ora Irwin, Mrs. Gladys Minor, Mrs. Juanita Holgate, Mrs. Martha Coenenberg, Mrs. Betty Stamp, Mrs. Dorcas Hoagland and Mrs. Isabel Card.

HIGH HOUSE HUNTING — Up she went and up she'll stay until some good samaritan can find a permanent apartment for her daughter, her husband and, of course, herself. Mrs. Arthur Ellis, 24, of Revere, Mass., plans to make the 50-foot high, six-foot square platform her abode until the good samaritan arrives.

Management Not As Well Prepared As Labor For Task Of Bargaining

By BRUCE BLOSSAT

Cyrus Ching, director of the Federal Mediation service, says he thinks it's fair to conclude that unions come to the bargaining table better prepared than employers.

He told the United States News: "I think they (the unions) frequently have a more persuasive background of figures and facts, whereas the employer, though well and ably represented is frequently unfamiliar with the statistics of the industry, or the area, or the practices in other establishments."

Ching cannot easily be accused of pro-labor bias. He was once labor relations director of the United States Rubber Company. Furthermore, his mediation service gets an "inside look at more labor disputes than any other agency sees."

Thus management's labor relations experts ought to feel some embarrassment at his statement.

Ching thinks too many employers are not properly prepared for bargaining because they still consider labor relations a side issue.

On the other hand, he believes that union negotiators often acquire wide familiarity with an industry's problems just from their repeated appearances in conferences with many firms in the field. Management, of course, cannot duplicate this experience.

A further management difficulty is that top executives nowadays bear a tremendous load. Many argue they are so burdened with having to make fast, accurate business decisions that they have virtually no time to see their job in any real perspective.

They don't always know all they should about their own company. They may never even glance at reports in trade papers or other sources that tell how the rest of the industry is handling particular problems.

Anyone can sympathize with their dilemma. But however great the load, it still seems fair to ask employers to arm themselves with the fullest possible information when they sit down with union leaders.

Management owes this much to itself, to the unions and to the public which wants a fair settlement of any dispute affecting the general welfare.

For all their burdens, employers have matchless facilities for assembling data pertinent to wage and other negotiations. If they fail to use them, they come handicapped to the bargaining table.

No fair-minded citizens care to see either management or labor at a disadvantage when they face each other. The two should meet on an equal footing. That means balance not alone in strength but in preparedness.

Vatican Decree Cold War Help, Moscow Claims

LONDON, July 25.—(AP)—The Moscow radio charged Friday that Roman Catholic excommunication of communists was a Vatican contribution to "the cold war that Anglo-American reactionaries are waging against the camp of peace and democracy."

It said the ban was intended "to split the united front of people fighting for peace against the anglo-american warmongers," and added that it was bound to fail.

The English-language broadcast by commentator Boris Isakov was the first public Russian reaction to the excommunication decree of July 13.

Isakov declared that by the decree "all the enormous ramified propaganda machinery of the Catholic church is placed at the service of the 'cold war' that anglo-american reactionaries are waging against the camp of peace and democracy. The July 13' decree is actually one more Vatican contribution to this 'cold war.'"

"The camp of peace and democracy" is a favorite Russian term for the soviet union and its satellites.

The broadcast accused Catholic clergy of "preying on the religious traditions and feelings of many plain people in an attempt to disarm them morally to weaken their will to resist the danger of a fresh aggression which is threatening the world."

"But this maneuver is doomed to failure," the Moscow radio said.

DOCTOR ON VACATION

Rodger Young, World War II Hero, Is Brought To Rest

CLYDE, O., July 25.—(AP)—Private Rodger Young, who traveled half around the world and died to make the first team, rested today in a hero's grave.

The infantry's own hero reached his final rest Friday in an elaborate military service that stretched from his home town of Green Springs, Ohio, six miles away, to McPherson cemetery in Clyde.

Rodger Young, who won the congressional medal of honor in steaming New Georgia in the Solomons, never could quite make the first team in basketball in high school. He tried, too.

But, Rodger was too short—a miniature five feet, six inches—in a game tallered for tall men. He was fast and he was furious and the coach sometimes put him in the lineup.

Hearing Impaired
Then, one day a basketball struck his head and impaired his hearing. He gave up school for that reason in his junior year. A few years later with the rest of company B, 148th infantry, 37th division, Rodger was in the South Pacific—a foot soldier.

He rose to sergeant in the rough, tough infantry. But, air raids and shelling lessened his hearing. So, Rodger voluntarily gave up his stripes. He was afraid his hearing might endanger his buddies in jungle fighting.

It looked like Rodger Young, the shy Ohioan with an ingrown sense of duty, might never make the first team.

But, he did.

About 3 p.m., July 31, 1943, Rodger and several hundred buddies were dug in on a hill in New Georgia. They were pinned down like a pocket flap by Japanese machine guns. One key pillbox particularly held the secret of life and death.

Withdrawal Ordered
One man a minute died from machine gun bullets. Withdrawal with certain heavy casualties were ordered.

Lt. Walter Rigby of Green Springs, a restaurant owner and then a technical sergeant in charge of Young's platoon, tells it this way:

"That day in New Georgia, I ordered everybody in the platoon to withdraw.

"Some say Rodger, who couldn't hear very well, didn't even hear me and that's why he went forward.

"I know better. He looked around at me. He shook his head and pointed to that pillbox. He was the only one that saw it. He started forward.

"He knew what he was doing all right."

Rodger Young, wounded three times, wiped out that pillbox before he died.

His feat inspired what Lt. Col. Joel M. Wareing, chaplain of the 148th infantry, calls one of the World War II—"The Ballad of two best songs to come out of Rodger Young."
