Communism In Asia Must Be Fought With Christianity, Lecturer Tells Rotary Club

Communism in Asia must be fought with Christianity, asserted Paul W. Travis, lecturer of Carmel, Calif., who spoke on his recent trip to Japan at the Roseburg Rotary club luncheon Thursday.

A navy chaplain during the recent war, who was recalled to active duty to undertake a public relations mission for the navy in Japan this year, Travis told of his impressions of the Hawaiian dock strike and of his visit in the Orient.

"The battle in the Far East is between Christianity and communism," Travis said. He was told by military authorities, "America can't win the Japanese over with an army, hence the occupation government's cooperation with Christian missionary efforts."

In Tokyo alone, Travis asserted, there are 500 agents working out of the Communist headquarters, while in all of Japan there are only 1,800 Christian missionaries, both Roman Catholic and Protestants.

Communism appeals to the Japanese, Travis said, because they have had national inferiority complex. Under the influence of the Russians, they can get in a position to "tell the white man off."

Travis showed numerous colored pictures he took during his trip, including casual street scenes of the Japanese people and of public buildings in Tokyo.

Enroute to Japan he visited in Hawaii, which has been paralyzed in recent weeks by a longshoremen's strike. It is believed, he said, that Communists there are making blueprints for other similar strikes throughout the world.

Travis will speak in Roseburg again Aug. 24, when he will show pictures of Greece and Italy at the First Methodist church.

Aid Arranged For Students Left Stranded

FARRAGUT, Idaho, Aug. 5—(AP)—Students stranded by the closing of Farragut college and technical institute have been promised funds to help them move.

James Anderson, business manager, said campus organizations would pool the $2,000 in their treasuries to help students without funds leave the school.

That will take care of the "hardship cases" among the 80 students stranded here when the college directors voted not to reopen this fall. The students, many of them married veterans, stayed on the campus during the summer because plenty of housing is available at the former naval training base.

Other students and several faculty members are searching schools where they can enroll or get jobs. Few of the colleges which will accept students yet for next fall have adequate housing to take married veterans with families, student leaders say.

Anderson said the college will make one last fight for its students. It will do what it can to divert college property leased

Here's something you can use now and all through the year—cake savors. The Hot-wares department at UMPQUA VALLEY HARDWARE has them in hand-painted enamel with a carrying rack for safe toting, like on a picnic. There are all-purpose hostess sets of colored plastic, with a cake plate that can be turned over and used for a sandwich or relish tray. The cover is equally versatile—turned upside down, it serves as a punch or salad bowl. Your choice of red, yellow, green or blue. For Mom and Dad's silver wedding, there is a cake plate of ruby red cut glass in your choice of three patterns. These have metal ribbed clear plastic tops. So pretty for serving those elaborate cakes, and so practical for keeping them fresh.

Are you disappointed with your shaggy rugs because they fuzz or shed lint? Then you should try Tumbletwill rugs, from JOSSE'S. Up the stairs and to the right, you'll find Mrs. Murphy or Mrs. Barron ready to show you these all woven cotton rugs with twisted loop pile. The staggered weave and twisted loop makes them resistant to fuzzing or shedding lint. Pre-shrunk, they may be washed in lukewarm suds. Sizes range from 22" x 36" to 9' x 12" in the popular oblong style. You can order the size you want in oval shape, or wall-to-wall sizes by the yard. Separate rubber mesh pads cut to the exact size of the rug are included with these shaggies. In fifteen luscious colors, what more could you ask?

Smell that fresh bread? That's the homemade milk loaf at CLEO'S QUALITY BAKERY, just down the street from the Star theater. Milk loaf and 100% wheat bread is made fresh every day right at Cleo's Bakery. On Tuesdays, they make salt-rising bread, too. On Wednesdays, it's Russian rye. On Thursdays, they make sourdough French bread, and those crusty French rolls that you get at the better restaurants. Now, you can have them for your own table, freshly baked at Cleo's.

A tolerant person is the true lover of God. Girls, it's time to think about school clothes again. But whether you're going to school or to work, you'll find blouses and skirts the most practical garb for every day of the week. Just look at these new blouses at EXCEL DRESS SHOPPE—here's a gray wool jersey overblouse with stripes across the front. It's cut like a vest, with pointed collar, pointed waistline, and long full sleeves with pointed cuffs. Another wool jersey blouse in heather beige or Kelly green has hand-smocking on the shoulders. Matching skirts are hand-smocked across the front. This hand-smocking trick is used on several rayon crepe blouses, too, and most effectively. One is a rich brown, with high neck and short sleeves, and another is bright, glowing red. There are dozens of others. We found a pink and a red one simply irresistible, and added them to our wardrobe. This time of year, anyone's wardrobe needs replenishing.
