CRON DIAL-LOG

In Memory of ... MARIANNE FENNER ... Prayer for the Dead

The homely little things of every day Were so much with her. Little cares And duties made her life—to dust the stairs, Put out the children's night things, pay Small bills in time for discounts, treasure In a box the Christmas tags and wrappings for another year.

What will she do, dear God, with all the space Of universes for her soul to tread? Without a dish to wash, a tumbled bed To smooth with loving hands, a fearful face To dry and kiss, a home to govern? Will not all Your golden mansions seem to her most dear?

So, in Your mercy, give to her, I pray, Something to do, at first, until she grows Accustomed to the change. Such things as here below Made full her busy day.

Perhaps Your smallest angels need a touch Of brushing for their wings—or those who light the stars To be reminded it is night.

—Faith Ellen Smith.
