Projected New State Office Building Will Cost $1,600,000

The State Highway commission, at a special meeting in Portland August 19, gave final approval to the plans for the proposed new office building to be used principally by the commission, and also by the office force of the district engineer of the United States Bureau of Roads. Bids for the construction of the building will be opened at the regular September meeting of the Highway commission in Portland September 19 and 20.

The building is to be five stories in height, with white marble exterior, the top story set back, the entire structure to be in conformity with the other buildings of the Capitol group. Plans were drawn by the firm of Whitehouse, Church, Newberry and Roehr of Portland, the estimated cost to be approximately $1,600,000.

The building is to be financed by a loan from the funds of the highway commission, to be amortized and repaid, both as to principal and interest, by rentals over a period of years. This is the same general financing plan employed in the construction of the general office building now being erected, which is being built with a loan from the irrevocable school fund, and the old office building, in which the highway commission now is partially housed, which was built with funds of the Industrial Accident commission and long since repaid.

The Highway commission now pays a rental of approximately $30,600 annually for the space it occupies, both in the state-owned office building and other quarters privately owned in Salem. When the new building is completed all highway offices located in Salem, together with the Bureau of Roads district office now in the Customs House in Portland, will be housed there.

Junior Red Cross Pair Goes To Training Center

Douglas Simms, executive secretary of the local Red Cross chapter drove Junior Red Cross representatives Thelma Anderson of Canyonville high school and Jimmy Lloyd of Yoncalla high to Salem Wednesday, where they took a bus to the Junior Red Cross training center at Silver Creek Falls.

Thelma and Jimmy will be met in Salem Sept. 3 and returned to their respective homes. It is expected that in addition to having a fine time, the two students will gain much in experience and training that will help them in carrying out the Red Cross program in their schools.

Daugherty Map For Myrtle Creek Project Approved

A special meeting last night, the Myrtle Creek city council accepted a map prepared by James R. Daugherty of Roseburg, their engineer, showing a complete monumented street center line plan, and tabled action on the necessary revisions of city boundary lines which were outlined in detail.

"Several members of last year's council, who had instigated the complete 'as is' survey, were present and explained that I had been retained to discover and correct the existing errors in both street and boundary lines," Daugherty explained this morning.

Notes for the field work already done were turned over to the council, along with a list of bench marks established to control the topographic survey of the city.

"I explained that small sewer lines located at the upper ends of the sewerage system were designed to serve single rows of lots on steep grades, where the existing house connections were all on the downhill side," Daugherty pointed out.

"It would have been too expensive to place larger mains in the streets to serve homes on both sides. I told the council that this situation was covered in my report which Mr. McGinty, the city attorney, did not give to the State Sanitary authority when he appeared before them recently."

"I offered to present the design to the state engineers and get the advantage of the saving in cost of sewer construction, because there are 20,330 feet of small lines involved," said Daugherty.

He has been criticized by Myrtle Creek city officials recently, for his work on a topographic survey for the proposed sewer system, and a survey of streets and city boundaries. Part of the criticism has been based on the supposed excessive cost of the work.

Daugherty said members of the former city administration were at the meeting to explain that he had been retained for the work, because the then city council knew that the survey and legal description of the city boundaries, prepared in 1909, did not correspond with conditions as they actually are.

Daugherty said they pointed out that his original estimate for the work was about $3,500 and the actual cost, of about $3,700, was reasonable for the work involved.

"Dry Camp" Trek Takes Boys To Garden Valley

A bicycle hike out Garden Valley road Thursday was the final offering this year of the "Dry Camp" sponsored by the Roseburg Y. M. C. A.

A group of local boys, under the leadership of Marlen Yoder, "Y" general secretary, left Roseburg at 9:30 a.m., and journeyed to the Garden Valley school, where they ate lunch and played softball.

On their return to Roseburg, the boys stopped at the home of one of the boys' grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Laurance, for a watermelon feed.

"Day Camp" activities will be suspended for the remainder of the summer because of school which is starting soon.

Salary, Checks At Issue In Action, Cross Complaint

Alleging the plaintiffs, Arundel corporation and L. E. Dixon corporation, have instituted suit in circuit court to hold up payment of his salary, Don Torres, one of the named defendants, has filed an answer, and cross complaint. The plaintiffs in their complaint stated they had stopped payment on the checks issued to Torres as salary, because the checks allegedly had been stolen from a box used for mail at Tokete construction camp. The two corporations tendered into court an amount equal to the checks' value, totalling $555.66, and had asked the court to determine to whom payment should be made. The checks allegedly were cashed at several Klamath Falls business houses, each named as defendants in the complaint. Torres states he received the checks between Aug. 1 and Sept.

30, 1948, but that he had no place to cash them in the remote construction camp nor to mail a letter containing the checks, except an open box, marked "U. S. Mail," provided at the camp. He stated he endorsed the checks "pay to the order of Mrs. D. V. Torres only," put them in an envelope addressed to his wife at Arroyo Seco, N. Mex., and dropped the letter in the box. He alleges an unknown party took the letter from the box, and cut off from each check part of the endorsement, leaving only the words, "D. V. Torres only."

He claims he has demanded payment from the plaintiffs for his salary, but that the corporations have refused to comply.
