Dark Colors Not Favored For Carpeting, Says Expert

Dark, conservative carpeting isn't the choice of most American women any more, according to a survey conducted recently by Clara Dudley, color-scheme consultant for the Alexander Smith & Sons Carpet company.

Beige led in popularity for floor coverings over all other shades. Miss Dudley, who directs the Clara Dudley Workshop at White Plains, N. Y., has kept a careful check of each individual visitor's preference in decorating colors, since the workshop opened last September. The survey was based on 1,568 person-to-person consultations which were held daily at the workshop, and on 4,605 mail request which came in from all over the country.

Although beige led the color field for carpeting, dark green and medium grey were close runners-up, with emerald and yellow greens in fourth place. Rose, Kelly green and aqua came next, with burgundy, once so much in evidence, at the bottom of the list.

In the field of fabrics, the majority of the people who go or write to Clara Dudley for advice love green, in all its various yellow and blue hues. Next come the orange reds and corals, followed by beige, taupe and blue-reds. Yellows, greys and off-whites are also popular. Blue, played up as the color of the season, hasn't lived up to its promise, this survey indicates.

Yellow green walls are the first choice of most workshop visitors and correspondents. Blue green, violet blue and blue grey are other popular off-tones for walls, with yellows, golden beiges and peach tints also favored.

Visitors to the workshop, or people who write in for decorating advice, receive suggested color schemes for their homes, plus samples of wallpaper, fabrics and floor coverings which can be bought in their home towns.

Miss Dudley will appear in person, through the courtesy of Joase's Home Furnishings, in Roseburg on Sept. 8 and 9 for consultations designed to show people how they can make their homes more attractive at low cost by the skillful use of color and by doing much of the work themselves.

Encouragement Is Seen In Lumber Industry Report

Independent operators in the lumber industry of Washington, Oregon and northern California reporting on operating and market conditions in August found both encouraging and discouraging factors, according to information released today by the Western Forest Industries Assn.

Dry weather kept the fire hazard high but no real conflagrations occurred in Washington and Oregon as they did in neighboring states of Idaho and Montana and lack of rain helped keep roads in fairly good shape so that more than 90 percent of those queried said logging conditions were "good." The majority thought orders were increasing or plentiful, except in Washington where more reported them "scarce" than "increasing."

Price experience varied widely. Sixty-five percent of the Oregon operators described prices as "steady" or "increasing" while the remainder said they were "decreasing" or "soft." Reports from Washington showed the percentages reversed. Prices in Northern California were said to be steady. Generally speaking the price level at the end of the month was higher than at the beginning.

Biggest problem of Oregon producers was the car shortage, most severe on the Southern Pacific lines but affecting other lines also to a lesser degree. Some shippers said they were receiving only 20 percent of the boxes ordered, hence mill stocks were increasing and in some instances mills had to shut down entirely. With immediate shipment specified by many buyers shippers were expecting a number of cancellations because of inability to get cars. As usual, operators in Washington, served by several railroads, were in a much better position to make shipments. Some Oregon plants were helped by receiving cars from the North stopped off to complete loading in transit.

Log supply was reported ample to heavy in most areas and while stumpage prices were fairly steady better than one-third of the Oregon and Washington operators noted decreases. Log prices were somewhat lower also, the sharpest drop being in hemlock, white fir and other species purchased largely by pulp mills.

Customers were said to be specifying widths and lengths almost 100 percent but some are allowing more leeway in mixing of grades with limitation on the lowest grades, of course.

Divergence Of Views Said Delaying Peace For Japan

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
General Douglas MacArthur's renewed call for negotiation of a peace treaty with Japan is couched in such laudatory terms regarding that defeated country's progress as to demand careful consideration by the Allied powers.

There are, however, stubborn complications to be overcome before headway can be made toward implementing the General's recommendation. Divergence of views among the allies thus far have precluded a settlement.

MacArthur first advocated a peace treaty more than two years ago. Subsequently the Far Eastern Big Four (America, Britain, Russia and China) considered ways and means but couldn't agree on the method of procedure.

Treaty Sought
Russia wanted a treaty drafted by the four powers; America and Britain thought it should be done by the Far Eastern commission comprising the 11 nations which fought against Japan—the United States, Russia, Britain, France, China, the Philippines, the Netherlands, Canada, Australia, India, and New Zealand. China offered an unsuccessful compromise that the Far Eastern commission draft the treaty but that decisions be subject to the unanimity of the Big Four.

Since then the situation has become immeasurably complicated by the success of the Chinese communists against Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's nationalist government. Should the Chinese Reds establish a stable regime it would split the Far Eastern Big Four into two equal camps—Russia and Communist China on one side and the Anglo-American pair on the other. It would be Communism versus Democracy again.

Action Needed
Despite the difficulties, however, the time is rapidly approaching when action will have to be taken. MacArthur says the Japanese have "fully and faithfully observed their surrender commitments" and "have well earned freedom and dignity and the opportunity which alone can come with the restoration of peace."

The General asserts that the "threat of communism as a major issue in Japanese life is past. The basic causes of social unrest throughout Asia have largely been eradicated in Japan by a re-design of the social structure to permit equalization of individual opportunity and personal privilege." The budget has been balanced.

Of course this doesn't mean that Japan's misdeeds will be forgotten. She has sinned greatly and must expect the Allies to insist that safeguards be taken against further transgression. However, Europe would seem to provide an object lesson in the matter of delaying too long in making peace treaties with Germany and Austria.

One of the manifestations of the cold war in Europe has been the failure to make treaties in the shooting war. The cold war which is being waged in the Far East won't be concluded until a peace treaty is made with Japan.

General MacArthur didn't indicate his idea of what the peace treaty should provide. One would expect that it would contain full safeguards against further aggression. These would include continued military occupation over a long period.

However, such restrictions need not interfere in any way with the new Japan taking her rightful place among nations of good will.
