U. S. Developing Aircraft Able To Fly At Speed Faster Than Sound

CLEVELAND, Sept. 21—(AP)—Aircraft able to fly at supersonic speeds for sustained periods are imminent, top government research experts told leaders in civil and military aviation here. Supersonic speed—meaning faster than sound, which under average surface air conditions is 761 miles an hour—has been achieved many times in the X-1, a rocket-powered research craft. But the X-1 has fuel for only 2 1/2 minutes at full power. Its dashes beyond the limits of sound speed are measured in seconds. The approach of sustained travel in the supersonic range was discussed briefly today during the third annual inspection of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics flight propulsion laboratory. Officials did not say how long they meant by "sustained," or how soon they meant by "imminent."
