

Camp Fire Girls' Triennial Meet Dated In Portland

Youth agencies must define clearly their places in current history. Mrs. James C. Parker, president of the National Council of Camp Fire Girls, Inc., said today as she urged volunteer and professional leaders of the youth agency to attend the organization's triennial convention in Portland, Ore., Oct. 23 to Oct. 29.

"The direction in which youth develops may be the decisive factor in world events tomorrow," Mrs. Parker explained. "Because America has been thrust into a position of world leadership, it is of unprecedented importance that youth be prepared for their and their country's future in vast affairs. Our youth, indeed, is the outpost of democracy which ought to be not just a theory of government but a dynamic spirit grounded in the individual's attitudes both toward himself and toward other people."

Mrs. Parker went on to say that leaders of Camp Fire Girls see within its program not merely wholesome fun and healthful activities but demonstration experiences by which girls grow toward their own greatness and master the techniques of group relationships.

Mission Worker From Africa To Speak At Church

IRA F. GILLET

A former Colorado and Oregon school teacher, who has given three decades of service as a missionary in the Methodist church in teaching trades and agriculture to young African tribesmen who are to go out as pastor-teachers among their fellow countrymen, will be the guest speaker at First Methodist church, Roseburg, at 7:30 p. m. Thursday, Sept. 29.

He is the Rev. Ira F. Gillet, who first went to Africa as a missionary in 1918, and who has served the years since in Mozambique, the Portuguese colony on the east coast of central Africa. Mr. Gillet will speak on his experiences and observations in this colony where he has traveled many thousands of miles and has been in close contact with the native people.

Mr. Gillet has been a pastor among the tribesmen, a superintendent directing the work of numerous African pastors and teachers, the principal of a training school in Kambini, and the editor of Christian literature produced both in English and in native dialect.

His longest period of service was as principal and teacher in Kambini Central Training school, where hundreds of young men were brought into the Christian church and school and trained as teachers, pastors, and agricultural demonstrators. Graduates from this school are found in hundreds of communities throughout this Portuguese colony today.

More recently Mr. Gillet has been developing another agricultural and industrial institution at Gilundu, Mozambique. Each year he travels thousands of miles, first, by boat and on foot, and more recently by car throughout the villages and travel lands helping to bring Christianity, the three "R's," and a better means of livelihood to the people.

Under Mr. Gillet's principalship, the Central Training school in Kambini rose to a place of leadership among mission schools in all this area of Africa. A large number of its graduates have gone into the Transvaal and the Union of South Africa during recent years and their influence there has been felt in the development of churches and schools.

Mr. Gillet has also been editor of the "South Africa Missionary Advocate" for 26 years. He was a delegate from Mozambique to the Madras meeting of the International Missionary council in 1938, and he has been in the United States as a delegate to general conferences of the Methodist church.

Mr. Gillet is a native of Wauseon, Ohio, and was educated at Denver University, Oregon State College, and Oberlin college and in its graduate school of theology. He taught in Fowler, Colo., before volunteering as a missionary among the tribesmen of the church. He calls Oregon City, Ore. his American home. His wife is the former Edith Clara Riggs, whose family have made notable missionary history through several generations in Turkey.
