Logged Over Lands Will Base Forest Research Plan

PORTLAND, Oct. 6. — (AP)—Washington forest lands logged over 65 years ago will be a research laboratory in experimental forest practices.

This was reported in a joint announcement by the Pacific Northwest Forest and Range Experiment station and Pope & Talbot, Inc.

The experimental forest is on Pope & Talbot land near Kings-ton in Kitsap county. The company logged the land 65 years ago and young growth Douglas fir is now on it.

The agreement calls for a 20-year program of management research in such things as wood utilization, practical thinning procedures, forest regeneration and bookkeeping results of costs and return.

The U. S. forest service will prepare the working plans and analyze the reports.

Known as the Hood Canal Experimental forest, it will be directed by Norman P. Worthing-ton, Olympia, head of the Puget Sound branch of the experimental station. Actual logging will be handled by the company. Findings will be made available to all forest owners.

RUSE OR ACCIDENT

SEASIDE, Oct. 6. — (AP)—A Portlander, preoccupied with an ailing battery, left his wife stranded at a Necanicum filling station.

A phone call to police Sunday reported the woman's plight; a station attendant gave the car a shove when the battery went dead. The driver headed for Portland. His wife was still at the station.

Police here said Tuesday that for all they know, the motorist never did come back.

The Appalachian Trail, a public hiking and riding track, extends 2,050 miles from Maine to Georgia.
