49 Children Get Examination At County's Clinic

Forty-nine Douglas county children with orthopedic defects were examined at the semi-annual crippled children's clinic conducted last Friday at the county health office, according to a report from Miss Lavenia Fulton of the health department.

The clinic was conducted by Dr. F. A. Short, orthopedic surgeon, Portland, and his staff, including a nursing consultant, a medical social worker of the crippled children's department and his secretary.

The examination was for the purpose of diagnosis and recommendation for further care, either in the home, or where eligible, for treatment at the Shriners and Doernbecher hospitals, Portland.

Any child up to 21 years of age with defects is eligible for examination. However, the total number is limited to 50 at each clinic under the present ruling. Anyone desiring information is requested to contact the county health department. Children may be seen, by appointment, at the health office, or where that is not possible, a county health nurse will call upon them, according to Miss Fulton.
