Ft. Stevens Site Being Appraised Previous To Sale

ASTORIA, Oct. 20. — (AP) — The government has begun appraising Fort Stevens property to determine a fair value for its sale. E. B. Herron of the war assets division for the General Service Administration in Seattle conferred with city officials of the town of Hammond near the port. Hammond officials are interested in obtaining parts of the fort property, Herron said. Herron expects the property to be put up for sale on a priority basis during the first 10 days of November. In addition to the town of Hammond, Joseph Hill of Portland's Hill Military academy is still interested in getting land and buildings for a school, Herron reported. He said also that the State Game commission wants about 1400 acres for a wildlife refuge and will probably get the part it seeks. Hammond is eager to get the parade ground, administration buildings, officers quarters, gymnasium together with a tract of 135 acres. Fort Columbia, Wash., another unit of the abandoned harbor defense posts on the Columbia will probably go to the state of Washington for park and recreational purposes, Herron reported.
