THIS HOME AT 1028 WHARTON STREET is assessed at $700, according to owner Ray Brown, Roseburg physical education instructor. Last year, he paid taxes amounting to $30.17. If this West Roseburg location is voted into the city in the coming annexation election, the Browns' taxes will be increased by $9.45. However, because of the high rate he is now paying for fire insurance on his property, Brown will actually save money by coming into the city. R. P. Layzell, the Browns' insurance agent, figures a yearly reduction of about $10 on fire insurance payments alone.

Another advantage Brown has noted is that his home and his family will receive police protection 24 hours a day, seven days a week, in addition to increased fire protection from the city's five fire trucks. Cost of repair and maintenance on Wharton street will be assumed by the city, as well as installation of bracket-type corner street lights. Even telephone service will be improved, with most phone subscribers placed on four-party lines, instead of the ten-party lines many of the residents now have. People of West Roseburg, and the Miller's Addition-Sleepy Hollow district will decide Nov. 1 at a special election whether or not they wish to approve annexation of these areas by the city. Ruling Will Resentence Convicts Or Liberate Them

OLYMPIA, Oct. 25—(AP)—An unprecedented review of the cases of bogus check passers in the state prison is in the offing. About 40 inmates are involved. The lucky ones will probably win their freedom on the grounds of improper sentencing.

Assistant attorney general John Blankenship said the inmates involved are those affected by a recent state supreme court ruling that a writer of a bad check must have been charged with receiving more than $25 before he could be sentenced for a felony. Otherwise it would be only a gross misdemeanor.

Many prisoners are serving sentences up to 15 years on improper felony charges.

Blankenship said the mass review of cases will be to decide which inmates should be taken back to their home counties for re-sentencing or release. A truck will swing around the state to drop them off in the various counties. Blankenship said, however, that some of them would face new charges because of other checks.
