WASHINGTON, Oct. 31—479—
After devoting most of his time since last January to appropriation bills. Senator Cordon (R-Ore) looks forward to hunting geese and fishing for salmon in his home state. home state.

his home state.

A member of seven Senate Appropriations subcommittees, Cordon says he worked on more money bills than any other member of the Senate. And he prides himself that he attended every session of the Senate this year. He is a member of the Appropriations subcommittees on agriculture, Armed Services, deficiencies, Army Civin functions, independent offices, Interior department and Treasury-Postofice. He is the ranking Republican on the latter group.

Day in and day out during most of the session he sat with subcommittees hearing requests for funds.

He left today for his home at Roseburg. Later he will go to the Klamath Falls area to hunt geese.

geese.
"But," he said, "I never did like to eat geese."

He plans to fish for salmon and will visit Depoe Bay and Newport. Congress appropriated funds for constructing a refuge harbor at Depoe Bay at Cordon's insistence. He succeeded in getting the money included in the Army Civil functions bill.

Cordon, who loves to hunt and fish, got out a few weekends during the recent session. But he doesn's care much for the trout fishing hereabouts. And when he went hunting in Virginia, "It always was the wrong day."

In the early part of December the Senator may go to Puerto Rico and the Virgin islands for the Senate Interior committee.

Prosecutor Sets Out To Trace Ex-Banker's Life

SEATTLE — (P) — Prosecutor Charles O. Carroll has set out to fill in a 14-year blank in the life of a confessed embezzler who refuses to say where he's been.

Allan Paul Hull, former Seattle banker wanted since 1935 on a charge of embezzling $8,500 returned to Seattle and gave himself up Friday. The money was taken from the former Tower Savings bank of which he was vice president.

Savings oank of which he was vice president.

Hull told Carroll he saved the $8,500 during the 14 years and planned to make full restitution. But he steadfastly refused to say where he had been or what he had been doing.

Even Alaska Ducks Have Gold Fever, Says Report ANCHORAGE, Alaska -

ANCHORAGE, Alaska—(IP)—
Now it appears even Alaska ducks have gold fever.
Nathan Oliver and his father, Unalakleet Eskimos, went hunting three miles up the Unalakleet river and bagged a couple of ducks. The largest one managed to limp away, but they caught the smaller one.
While cleaning the bird, Mrs. Oliver discovered a veritable cache of coarse gold.
With this, the excited hunters returned to the field in search of the other duck in hopes it might be carrying a larger gold cargo. But no luck.
An Anchorage man who saw the Olivers' gold said some of it could be classed as small nuggets. He estimated they were worth about $2, and observed:
"That gold was well digested, but I don't think it was salted."

Salem Police Say Negroes Are Welcome In City

SALEM - (A) - The case of a Negro, who charged he was or-dered out of town by a Salem po-liceman, has been settled, as far as the police department was con-cerned.

Police officials promised at a hearing yesterday that Negroes could come here whenever they wished. Assistant Police Chief E. C. Charlton said the police department "has no feeling of race prejudice."

Alderman farms, which brought the complaint on behalf of their Negro employes, said they were satisfied that the case should be closed.

The principals in the controversy disagreed about what actually happened. Ward Jackson Sr., 51-year-old Portland Negro, said in a sworn affidavit that he was awaiting his farm wages when a patrolman approached.

"He ordered us to move out toward the curh," Jackson said in the statement filed with the state fair employment practices advisory commission. "We all started to move; then the officer beckoned to me.

"He said, 'what's your business here?' I explained. He said 'when you get your check you be God damn bus out of here because I don't want you hanging around'."

Officer Arch Wilson said he merely asked a group of people "not to congregate so as to block traffic."
