Lending super amounts of prestige to the "Linger Awhile" program was yesterday's interview-session on the show with authoress Charlotte Edwards, Roseburg resident... formerly, Philadelphia. A fiction story written by Mrs. Edwards, titled "Day of Grace," appears in the November issue of the "Ladies Home Journal" magazine, currently on the newsstands. Her fascinating story begins on page 42 of this women's magazine and is illustrated by Arthur Sarnoff. Don't miss it!

Producer Ted Robertson and his assistant, Ray Kemper, who were the first radio men ever to record secret ceremonial rites at the annual inter-tribal Indian celebrations in Gallup, New Mexico, this past summer, have been specially invited to attend another intra-continental Indian pow-wow, this time in Phoenix. They will record additional material for background use on Mutual Don Lee's thrice-weekly "Straight Arrow" programs. This type of authentic Indian tribal rites, songs, ceremonies and chants is an integral part of the program's over-all campaign to better acquaint the listening public with the lore, traditions and history of America's Indian peoples. The "Straight Arrow" program presents adventure stories using a Comanche Indian chief as the hero. (Tues. & Thurs., 5-5:30 p. m.; Fridays, 8-8:30 p. m.)

Model Law For Highway Departments in Making SALEM. (AP)—J. M. Devers, attorney for the State Highway commission, is preparing a model law on organization of State Highway departments. Devers, who is chairman of the National Association of State Highway officials, said the law would be considered by the association next spring. If it is approved there, then it will be submitted to each state, with a suggestion that each state adopt it. Devers said many states are backward and ancient in their laws on highway construction and location. He said much better results could be obtained if each state had the same, modern law for its own highway department. Devers also is preparing a proposed uniform law for all countries to use in all states in connection with acquiring rights of way for county roads.

Chinese Reds May Try To Spread Ism By Invasion Of Neighbor Countries

By DEWITT MACKENZIE (AP Foreign Affairs Analyst) The sweeping success of the Communist armies in China has set the chancelleries of the western world to pondering whether the victorious forces are likely to halt at China's frontiers or whether they may try to spread the red ism by invasion of neighboring countries.

Secretary of State Acheson has expressed concern that the Reds might strike beyond China. However, many diplomats take the view that the Communists won't invade other nations militarily but will depend on fifth column offensives, with perhaps later infiltration by guerrillas.

Whatever may be the procedure, of this I think we may be sure: Moscow is bound to take advantage of the Communist success in China to try to spread Bolshevism throughout the Far East.

Naturally thoughts immediately turn to Burma and to the Indian peninsula, which comprises the nations of India and Pakistan. This vast territory contains more than 400,000,000 people—close to a fifth of the globe's population.

The Chinese Nationalists still hold that part of Western China adjoining Burma. But should the Communist armies capture this Chinese territory they would have direct communication with Burma and thence with India.

It is hard to believe that the Chinese Communists would venture any military invasion of Burma and India. It is equally hard to believe that they wouldn't intensify their already vigorous efforts to convert these countries to the Red ism. There already are Communist parties on the Indian peninsula and in Burma. India Reds Long Active Actually the efforts to communize India stretch back as far as the revolution of 1917 which brought Bolshevism to power in Russia. I spent several months in India at that time and encountered Communism myself, although the British secret service—which covered the country like a net—was keeping close tabs on all such movements. Despite this generation-long crusade, Communism never has made great headway in Pakistan or India. In Burma, on the other hand, the Reds have made considerable progress, though just how substantial that progress may be is questionable. The Burmese are great individualists, and I think we may assume that any lasting Communism there would be of the Tito variety. That is to say, the Burmese are unlikely to subscribe to an ism which deprives them of their sovereignty and makes them answerable to Moscow. That same thing is true of both Pakistan and India. They are intensely nationalistic and wouldn't surrender one iota of their sovereignty to another nation. They made that amply clear in their long fight against England's domination. As a matter of fact much the same can be said of many other areas of Southeast Asia.

Mileage Death Rate Drop Little Cause For Praise

CHICAGO. (AP)—American motorists have scored the lowest nine months mileage death rate in history, but they're getting no pat on the back.

Unless a new incentive for safer driving and walking is found, the National Safety Council says: "The nation can reconcile itself to an annual traffic death toll of around 32,000."

The council said traffic deaths the first nine months of 1949 are about on a par with the same 1948 period. The 1949 toll was 22,320 compared with 22,750 in 1948.

The mileage death rate this year is seven deaths for every 100,000,000 miles, lowest nine month rate in history. Travel volume is seven percent ahead of 1948 and 25 per cent greater than 1941.
