Tokyo (P)—Hideo Sato and Taihei Ikeda have returned from the war—four years late.

Here's the story they told after their arrival on the British ship Yunnan:

They were on Manus, largest of the Admiralty Islands, when the Americans landed in 1944. They hid.

They built and lived in palmitatched huts, ate snakes, lizards and coconuts. They caught fish with hooks made from old pistol springs and lines woven from wood fiber.

They didn't know the war was over until last March when they were found by Aborigines and turned over to Australians.
