Girls Trained In Baby Sitting

Junior high school girls, ranging in ages from 13 to 16 years, have just completed a three weeks' course in baby sitting. Mrs. Eleanor Russell, in whose home economics classes the course was conducted, said the approximate 125 girls were given special instructions to qualify them to care for children. A list of the girls who will be available upon call is now on file at the junior high office, and persons desiring girls to care for their children may contact the school, said Mrs. Russell. The girls arbitrarily decided upon a rate of 35 cents an hour up to midnight, with 50 cents thereafter. However, they felt they should be given extra consideration if they take on additional duties, such as cleaning work or doing the dishes. Babies were brought into the classroom, and the girls were given instructions as to sleeping and eating habits, the "do's and don'ts" for babies, how to put them to bed and to keep them quiet, proper toys and other training. The class was conducted early, both to offer a service to the community and to permit the girls to earn a little money of their own during the school year, according to Mrs. Russell.

MORE TURTLES FOR KIDS
In response to a telegram from George Patterson of Patterson's bakery, 500 live turtles arrived by air from Louisiana yesterday and were delivered to Goettel's. The turtles will be given to children at Patterson's on Saturday from 11 to 12. Last week many children were disappointed when the supply of turtles ran out during the grand opening of Patterson's new bakery at Sykes and Short streets.
