

Case Transferred To Circuit Court

Answer of the defendants to the plaintiffs' complaint has caused a transfer of courts in the case George A. Binder and Orpha E. Binder vs. L. E. Mooney and Cecelia C. Mooney.

In the initial complaint, plaintiffs demanded judgment for restitution and possession of property located west of Drata and known as the old Hart place, or Lessors' ranch, alleging that defendants had not fulfilled terms of contract in leasing the property.

Answer of the defendants, which raises an equitable defense, states that plaintiffs did not take steps to assure defendants of an adequate and pure water supply, in violation of the said contract.

The case has been transferred to circuit court from the justice court of Drain.

A second money suit filed in circuit court is State Industrial Accident commission vs. Edgar R. Eitrem, doing business as Club 99 or the Steak House.

Plaintiff demands judgment for payment of $109.96, allegedly due, plus interest on the sum of $81.94. Plaintiff also asks that a lien placed against property of defendant be declared valid.
