"Rats" in Attic Prove To Be Wanted Fugitive

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 1.—(AP)—Police officers R. A. Jenkins and I. C. Salseda had stationed themselves in the room of a man wanted for questioning in a slaying. After several hours, Jenkins tapped his partner on the shoulder. "You know," he whispered, "I think this place has rats." "Rats?" "Yeah. In the attic. Listen." The landlord, however, insisted there were no rodents in his rooming house. So the three climbed into the attic to investigate. There they found William Chambers, 40. He was drinking gin, the officers reported. Chambers is accused of stabbing his girl friend, Mayver Miller, 37, when he found her telephoning another man. He's now in jail, booked on suspicion of murder.

State State Institution For Sex Psychopaths Studied

SALEM.—(AP)—The state board of control said it would study whether Oregon should have a separate institution for sex psychopaths. Secretary of State Newbry said a committee of three laymen should be appointed to study New York's institution for psychopaths. But Governor McKay answered that the study should be made by persons on the state hospital or board of control staffs. Newbry said he hoped the board would complete the study in time for the 1951 legislature to adopt a plan for care of psychopaths. McKay said he thought all judges should adopt the plan of Circuit Judge Rex Kimmel.
