LEGAL

Accused Woman

The trial of Ruth McPherson, charged in a grand jury indictment with "transporting a female for the purpose of prostitution," continued in circuit court today, the trial opened Tuesday, with most of the day given over to the selection of a jury. Opening remarks were made by the state and defense attorneys, and one witness, Edna Mae Benedetti took the stand.

The court was recessed after Daniel Dimick, one of the defense took the stand.

The court was recessed after Daniel Dimick, one of the defense attorneys, moved to have the case dismissed on grounds that transportating a female for the purpose alleged was no crime in Oregon, and further that the charge as stated was insufficient to indicate a crime had been committed.

dicate a crime had been com-mitted.

The jury consisted of Lenora Cooper, Mrs. Doris Garrett, Joe Spousta, C. L. Fullerton, Emily Ferguson, W. R. Denton, Leslie Hancock, F. A. Becker, A. A. Jacobs, Ray C. Lawrence, Nettle Woodruff and William H. Mc-Lain.
