Five Bouts Go Less Than Eight Rounds

SEATTLE. — (AP)—A five-bout boxing card lasted less than eight full rounds here Tues. night with John L. Davis, Oakland negro, climaxing the streamlined fist show with a two-round knockout of Billy Eddy of Detroit. Davis weighed 139, Eddy 141. The match had been scheduled for 10 heats.

Not a bout went the full distance. Eddie Cotton, 166, Seattle, knocked out John L. Sullivan, 172, Portland, in one round; Tommy Umeda, 125, Seattle, kayoed Mel Eagleman, 126, Chemawa, Ore., in two; Mel Scott, 144, Seattle, dropped Rosco Wright, 144, Seattle, in one; and Johnny O'Day, 160, Portland, won on a foul in the second round from Frank Crane, 160, Seattle.

OSC Coach, Dean Address Alumni Group

COACH RECOUNTS OSC GRID WINS-LOSSES—Chalmers "Bump" Elliott, Oregon State college backfield coach, standing, reviewed OSC's enviable 1949 football record at a meeting of OSC alumni in the Umpqua hotel Tuesday night. He later described the Oregon-OSC football game, during a motion picture showing of the game. Main speaker on the program was Dr. Clifford E. Maser, dean of OSC's new school of Business and Technology, extreme right. Others in the picture are Wayne Mosher, left, and Bob Knoll, OSC alumni manager. —(Staff photo)

Oregon State college alumni and boosters were told Tuesday night by Dr. C. E. Maser, dean of OSC's new school of business and technology, they have many reasons to be proud of their college.

Dr. Maser, Coach Chalmers "Bump" Elliott and Alumni manager Bob Knoll were guests of the Roseburg OSC alumni group at a dinner meeting in the Umpqua hotel.

Elliott reviewed Beaver football successes of the past season and described a color motion picture recording the recent OSC-University of Oregon football classic at Eugene, which the Beavers won.

Beaver alums were told by Maser that OSC is a "large institution with small institution traditions. . . I know of a no more democratic or friendly institution," Maser said.

The "youngest dean on the Oregon State college campus" said the college at Corvallis is "close to the soil," and indicated the "nature of OSC would always be close to the nature of the area in which it is located, for which the college should be grateful."

He told his partisan listeners that the phone rings daily at Oregon State, with people from over the world seeking answers to production problems.

Men come from over the nation to attend the Forestry school. . . "not because they 'think' it's a good school, but because it 'is' a good school," Dr. Maser stated.

The meteoric rise of the business and technology school at OSC was described by Dr. Maser, who was given the job of putting the school on its feet after the state board of higher education gave the business and industry department "school status."

He told how many innovations incorporated by OSC's new business school were heralded and copied by large school representatives throughout the nation.

The capacity OSC crowd heard Maser liken Dr. A. L. Strand, the college's president, to Abraham Lincoln. They were told OSC's agricultural school is one of the five best in the country; that the school itself ranks next to Penn. State, Michigan State, Cornell State and Iowa State, "in that order."

"People over the country know more about Oregon State than you do," Maser told his listeners.

He told alumni and boosters they should be proud of their "cow college."

Elliott, OSC backfield coach, outlined the Beaver football team's early season reverses and described the club as a "second half" team, winding up the season strong.

He was pessimistic about next year's football outlook and acknowledged that the University of Oregon had an "excellent" freshman organization.

Ray Puckett, Douglas county OSC Alumni association director, introduced Alumni Manager Bob Knoll, who introduced the guest speakers.

Sportsmen Ask Elk Hunting Extension

BAKER, Dec. 7. — (AP)—An extended elk season was urged on the Oregon State Game commission which held a session here with about 30 sportsmen and ranchers from eastern Oregon.

Ranchers said that a longer hunting season on elk could cut down the depredations of these animals while sportsmen maintained that special season deer and elk hunting areas should be enlarged.

Carl Hill, Days Creek game commission member, was in charge of the session. Also present was O. D. Hotchkiss, Prineville, president of the Oregon Cattlemen's association, Marvin Wendt, president of the Baker County Livestock association, spoke for the local group.

GRID TROPHY AWARDED
Des Moines, Dec. 7. — (AP)—Edward Bagdon, 23-year-old Michigan State guard, was announced today as the winner of the Dr. John H. Outland trophy awarded annually to the country's outstanding guard or tackle by Football Writers' Association of America.
