In Pro Grid Finale

The Green Bay Packers, National league kingpins three straight years from 1929 through 1931, again afforded evidence of how the mighty have fallen. They lost their finale to Detroil, 21-7, winding up the champaign with a 2-10 record.

Next Sunday's NFL final will come just one day before the official merger of that league and the AAC into a newly formed 13-club organization to be known as the National-American Football league.

Bob Waterfield and Rookie Norm Van Brocklin of the Rams fired six touchdown passes as Los Angeles won its first western title. Van Brocklin pitched four.

A capacity crowd roared its approval. Dusette's weight was announced as 183.

Dusette's performance in the final round was a duplicate of his tactics in the second, when his foe, after overstaying the time limit for the rest period, reappeared massaging his punished neck and wearing a cry-baby expression. Thrice the great one plunged into the ropes to escape the full-nelson holds, and on the fourth occasion he refused to renter the ring. With the ropes between the grapplers, Dusette applied the nelson clamp again and Atlas sank to the platform as limp as a dishrag. When he regained his feet, he still declined to return to the mat and Referee Elton Owen, after the prescribed count of 10, declared Dusette the winner; time, 3:45. Amid a bedlam of boos Atlas returned to the dressing room, followed by announcement that the Boxing commission had suspended him for 30 days for failing to finish the final round.

Results Of Other Bouts

The second bout on the card saw the return here of lanky Gordon Hessell of New Mexico, remembered by local fans for his spectacular reverse flying head scissors. He tried that hold on Maurice LaChappelle Saturday affair, with Myrtle Creek coming up fast at the end Quarter scores were: 9-7, 17-13, and 25-19. With only three divides the first one in 13:49 on a hangman. In the remaining 4 minutes 21 seconds of the half-hour time limit, neither man scored a fall, so the bout was automatically registered as a draw.
