New Weapon Developed To Fight Ravaging Mexican Bean Beetle

By FRANK CAREY (Associated Press Writer)
TAMPA, Fla., (AP)—The nation's top bug-fighters have been told of a new weapon against the pesky and prevalent Mexican bean beetle—the "ladybird beetle gone wrong."

A New York entomologist reported development of a new and persistent chemical fighter of this ravaging bean-pest which is largely immune to most other insecticides, including DDT.

Dr. J. G. Sanders of the Commercial Solvents corporation reported that commercial supplies would be available for the 1950 growing season to combat the insect which is in a particular league east of the Mississippi river but is found in some other areas as well.
Dr. A. M. Boyce, University of California entomologist, told a reporter that the pest is known as "the ladybird beetle gone wrong" for this reason:
It's a member of the family of ladybird beetles which ordinarily are beneficial to agriculture—preying on various crop insects—but the Mexican bean beetle left the sorority and became strictly a bean vegetarian. It ranks as a major agricultural pest.

Dr. Sanders said the new compound is a combination of two derivatives of a class of organic chemicals known as the "nitro-paraffins."

Its outstanding use was against the Mexican bean beetle, but the compound also had utility against certain other field crops and fruit pests, Sanders declared. Chemicals of this particular class, he added, offered a new and distinct ally in the war on insects.
They are distinguished, he said, from chemicals like DDT which feature chlorine, and from insecticides like "parathion" which feature phosphorus.
Stronger Than Rotenone
Sanders said that up to now the most effective weapon against the Mexican bean beetle has been the natural insecticide "rottenone"—sometimes in combination with another natural insecticide called "pyrethrum."
But he declared the new nitro-paraffin derivative has four times the lasting effect of rotenone, and hence control of the bean beetle by this means will be cheaper.
He said a single application of the new stuff—either as a dust or spray—will free beans of beetles for at least two weeks, whereas rotenone must be applied four times as often to achieve similar control.
The beetle, he said, principally plagues farmers and home gardeners all the way from northern Florida through New England and westward to the Mississippi. It also occurs to some extent in Colorado, and is "coming into Minnesota and Wisconsin."

Approved Housing Units Slash In Number Sought

Approval of 60 units of a low rent public housing project, made Friday by the Public Housing Administration, represents a cut of 70 percent from the 200 units originally requested for the Roseburg area by city officials and the county court, according to H. L. Scofield, director of the Douglas Housing authority.

However, Scofield said the amount asked in the planning loan is sufficient survey money for this area to determine how much public housing should be allowed. A request for the original $24,000 planning loan is now pending before President Truman.

Scofield emphasized that the 60-unit allocation announced by the Public Housing Administration "in no way" affects housing applications by three other Douglas county communities.
"Applications for public housing in Reedsport, Sutherlin and Oakland are still pending before the housing administration," Scofield said.

Canyonville Sells Batch Of Timber

The Canyonville city council, at a special meeting Tuesday night, approved a contract for the sale of timber on the city's watershed to the Miller's Logging company, the Myrtle Creek Mail reports.

According to the contract, the logging company agrees to pay $4 per thousand stumpage, which will total between $10,000 and $12,000 to be paid in two monthly installments.

First payments, according to City Attorney James McGinty who drew up the contract, will pay off the $3,000 indebtedness still owed the county for purchase of the land.
Three years will be the allowed time in which to complete the operation. A $2,000 bond will be posted to insure compliance with the contract.
Included in the contract are the following terms: Miller Logging company will set up a portable saw on the city's property and will saw timber into lumber on the site, and will sell rough lumber directly or will take the lumber to a planing mill to be surfaced.
The logging company will fell nothing less than 12-inch in diameter, breast high below the dam and nothing less than 16-inch in diameter, breast high above the dam on O'Shea creek.
CHAINS STILL NEEDED
SALEM, Dec. 20. —(AP)—Highway conditions were much improved today, but chains are still needed on the Wapinitia cutoff, the Pacific highway over the Siskiyou, on the old Oregon trail near Meacham, and at Burns.

Damages Asked Of Lumber Firm

Carl Grove has filed suit in circuit court asking judgment for $20,000 general damages and $1,024 special damages plus costs from the Roseburg Lumber Co.
Grove charges in his complaint that he sustained injuries while sawlogs were being loaded from a landing to trucks, in a "careless" and "reckless" manner.
The complaint added that the plaintiff was caught in the bite of a line and struck "with great force in the shoulder, neck and head by a steel cable, thereby rendering the plaintiff unconscious, bruised and broken."
