Writers in Magazine Believe 1950 Level Of Economy Will Remain Near 1949 Level For Pacific Northwest

SEATTLE (AP)—The consensus of contributors to the December issue of the Pacific Northwest Industry is that the region's economy for 1950 "should remain close to the 1949 level."

The publication is issued by the Bureau of Business Research at the University of Washington.

The economic reports and forecasts cover Washington, Oregon, Idaho, British Columbia and Western Montana. They were by five campus economists, eight chamber of commerce representatives and one editor.

In summarizing their forecasts for a prosperous 1950, tempered by some uneasiness and unfavorable aspects, Editor Charles J. Miller wrote:

"The reasoning behind this composite conclusion is sound: construction is expected to be maintained at high levels, as are production of lumber and aluminum."

"Farm income will be protected by the federal government; Veterans will receive substantial cash payments in the form of insurance premium refunds and bonuses."

"The areas' income in 1948 was higher than for any previous year."

"Our population growth continues."

"Nationally and locally we have declined from that abnormally high point of business activity made possible by pent-up demand to a more normal and wholesome replacement demand basis."

"The new level, while not as profitable as the peak, is a safe, and—for most segments of our economy—an extremely profitable level."

"But this encouraging area forecast is not one of unrestrained optimism. Underlying it is a feeling of uncertainty and even of uneasiness."

Potential Danger Seen

"One contributor (E. M. Wetherell of the Tacoma Chamber of Commerce) wrote that the business leaders in his area view 1950 with a feeling of 'tempered optimism.' The tempering factors obviously are related to the problems of the areas and the nation and to what is perhaps the greatest potential danger of all: that consumers will stop buying or industry and business will retrench on plans for expansion, research and aggressive promotion because of over-vidid imaginations stimulated by timidity. Both groups have money to spend.

"Three new area problems appeared in 1949—(1) A modest upturn in unemployment; (2) Devaluation of currency by some 30 nations; and (3) Area defense and decentralization of defense industries.

"The former is not yet of concern but the latter two have caused some serious maladjustments, with the longer-term effects not clearly foreseeable.

"Prices of farm products continue downward, but federal money will prevent hardship in that area.

"The power shortage remains critical and prevents unlimited industrial expansion."

He cited the steadily falling Boeing Aircraft payroll as a major problem in the Seattle area, but expressed the opinion that for the region "national problems loom more important" than local ones.
