In Rush At Courthouse

The Roseburg branch of the state department car license division is doing a rushing business, as the Dec. 31 deadline for purchasing of 1950 motor vehicle plates draws near.

Long lines of waiting persons stretch from the sales counter upstairs in the courthouse through the halis, down the stairs to the main floor lobby.

Five girls are at work processing the license applications and passing out the plates.

Allena Farenbaugh, office manager, said the rush has continued all week, but will probably taper off sharply immediately after the first of the year.

Such offices as the Roseburg branch, set up here a year ago, have made possible the securing of license plates without having to go through the Salem office.
