Congress Eyes President's Aid To Education Projects

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON—(AP)—President Truman has proposed two programs for helping education with government money. Neither can start unless Congress approves.

1. Under plan No. 1 the government would give the states about $300,000,000 a year to help them provide more and better education in the grammar and high schools.

ADD 2—24

CONGRESS EYES

With this money—which would go the the states—more teachers could be hired or teachers could be paid better to keep them teaching, or more and better school houses could be built.

This is the well-known federal aid to education plan. The Senate approved it in 1949, but not the House. This year the House also may approve. If so, plan No. 1 will begin.

Plan No. 2

2. Plan No. 2, less well-known than the other, would provide scholarships for students who have the ability and desire to go to college but can't affort it. How much would this cost?

About $100,000,000 a year, say government specialists now trying to work out details of the plan which the President can offer to congress for action.

Would that $100 million provide scholarships for every student who had the ability and desire to go to college but couldn't afford it? No.

The specialists say it would give scholarships to perhaps 175,000 students. Does that cover all who might need such help? No, again say the specialists. Just a small percentage.

This year Congress will be asked to vote $1 million to lay the foundations for the plan. Once that's done, if it's done, then Congress will be asked to put it into operation with perhaps $100 million a year.

Idea Not New

This federal scholarship idea isn't new. Educators have discussed it for years. It was recommended in 1947 by the President's commission on higher education, a group of educators and distinguished citizens appointed by Mr. Truman to study college needs.

Not all educators agree it's a good thing. Some of the opponents argue this way:

Ambitious and needy students can still find ways of going through college. If the government pays the freight for them, they will get the notion we have a "welfare state." There's no reason why ordinary people should be taxed to give an education to those brighter than the rest of us. It might lead to federal control of schools.

Supporters of the plan put their views this way, in part:

Government scholarships are necessary to equalize educational opportunities. There's little or no danger of Federal control in such a program. The government right now is helping 67 land-grant colleges — State-supported schools—with more than $170 million a year. The government has spent more than $3,500,000,000 on education for war veterans.

McGrath Answers Critics

To the argument—"ambitious and needy students can still find ways of going through college"—the U.S. commissioner of education, Earl J. McGrath, says:

"This is a myth. Some do get through. But among the highly gifted graduated of high schools . . . there are at least as many who never get to college as there are those who do."

In his budget message Mr. Truman said: "the nation cannot afford to waste human potentialities, as we are now doing, by . . . failing to help hundreds of thousands of young people who could benefit from higher education."

You'll hear more of this when the plan, in detail goes to Congress.

HAL BOYLE SAYS:

Stay In Your Grave, Jesse James; That's Where We Want You

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK—(AP)—There's a cantankerous old galoot in town who says he's Jesse James, and I wish he wouldn't say it.

Because there is always the odd doubt it might be true.

And that would be as disturbing as if Robin Hood should come alive again, and lose a bow-and-arrow match with an unemployed Indian.

The gent who claims he's Jesse James is a white-bearded, bed-ridden man named J. Frank Dalton, who certainly is old and certainly can cuss like a man out of the last century.

James Shot Dead

History says that outlaw Jesse James, while living in St. Joseph Mo., under the nom-de-pistol of Mr. Howard, was shot to death on April 3, 1892. He was plugged from behind by a member of his own band, Bob Ford, while hanging a picture.

But, now, after all these years, along comes Dalton and says no, 'twaren't Jesse that was killed—it was Charlie Bigelow, still another member of the band. But they buried Charlie as Jesse to fool the federals, and Jesse escaped and has lived ever since as J. Frank Dalton.

If this account is true—and there are those who believe it, just as there are those who believe that if you leave a horsehair in a jar of water it will turn into a snake—old Jesse would be nigh onto 103 years old, something of a record in the outlaw industry.

Matter Of Jest

Io the effete East it is a matter of mere jest whether ole Frank is ole Jesse, but it isn't to anyone who spent his boyhood in the Missouri haunts of the James band. To us Jesse then was a symbol of the defeated South, a man who refused to surrender, who robbed the rich and helped the poor.

It is a lousy outlaw indeed who doesn't have this robe of glamor thrown around him after death. As a boy we used to search through caves around Kansas City, hopeful of finding some of Jesse's forgotten loot. And it was hard to keep the tears back when we chanted that song about Bob Ford, "The dirty little coward, who shot Mr. Howard, and laid poor Jesse in his grave."

Boys are rebels by nature and to us Jesse was the supreme rebel —misunderstood, as all boys feel they are, too, but fighting back. I suppose there are thousands of midwest kids who still hug this legendary Jesse to their hearts.

No, Not That

This pleasant mildewed memory would be shattered mightily if it turned out that, instead of being murdered by a traitor, ole Jesse had been taking it on the lam from the law for almost 68 years. We want our heroes and our outlaws to die gamely—with their boots on.

Wouldn't it make you a little sick, even, to hire an elderly paperhanger in a zoot suit 30 years from now and have him turn out to be Adolf Hitler?

Certain situations in life require certain endings. And the only way J. Frank Dalton could satisfy us he is the real Jesse James is if he were winged and captured by the FBI as he stood, six-guns flaming and beard streaming in the wind, trying to hold up a train to pay off the mortgage on some pore widder's shack.

That was the Jesse we believed in—although he probably never really lived either. Stay in your grave, Jesse.

Marshall Plan Nations Urged To Weld Economies

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13 —(AP)— President Truman submitted a report to Congress Thursday urging Eruope's Marshall plan countries to weld their economies into a "single producing and trading area" of 270,000,000 people.

The report, prepared by the Economic Cooperation administration, said American dollars have strengthened Europe's economy to the point where the 16 nations can take this "radical" step without risk.

"Although economic integration is obviously a long-term objective, the present time is favorable for initiating this program," it said.

It predicted such a move would bring a boom in manufacturing and trading throughout all of Western Europe. This would "immeasurably improve" the sale of European goods in dollar markets and "more nearly satisfy" the expectations and needs of the European peoples, ECA said.

The president made no comment of his own on the need for integration. But by submitting it to Congress as his sixth report on ECA operations, he gave added weight to Administrator Paul Hoffman's repeated pleas for action on such a step.

Gen. George C. Marshall, father of the Marshall plan when he was Secretary of State, said that the European recovery program has made more progress in the last two years than official Washington expected.

The report made it plain the United States does not expect integration overnight. It foresaw the need for limited objectives to begin with, such as nations joining together in small economic groups first and later merging into one giant trading area.

In looking over Europe's economic comeback, it found these two dark spots for the three month period ending Sept. 30:

1. Although agricultural output is near prewar levels, it is not up to the hoped-for goals.

2. The response of American businessmen to ECA-sponsored investment opportunities has been "disappointing."

VA Is Assembling Figures To Back President's Hint Of GI Bill Schooling Abuse

WASHINGTON. — (AP) — The Veterans administration is assembling figures to back up President Truman's hint at signs of widespread abuse of the GI education program.

Officials said today they plan to hand a 400-page report to the Senate Labor committee by Feb. 1. They wouldn't say what it contained, but they disclosed this background:

1. The number of privately-owned profit-making schools below the college level has increased 200 per cent since the start of the vetrans training and ducation program—from 3,200 in June, 1944, to 8,800 in October, 1949.

Little Control

2. State accrediting agencies have little control over the increase. They must accredit schools so long as the equipment and facilities are satisfactory, without regard to the actual need for the schools.

3. VA has neither the funds nor the authority to investigate the motives of veterans enrolling in such schools, even though its suspects that many are using the $120-a-month subsistence payments as a form of unemployment relief.

In his budget message Monday, Mr. Truman said the current enrollment in the veterans education and training program is 400,000 greater than was expected a year ago, chiefly because of enrollment increases in trade and vocational schools.

Appropriation Due

"Largely because of this unexnected increase I shall soon transmit to the Congress a supplemental appropriation of about $700,000,000," he said.

"The continued expansion of enrollment in schools below college level raises the question whether this program still conforms to the original sound objectives of the Servicemen's Readjustment act.

"There is some question whether large numbers of veterans enrolled in these schools are in fact being trained for occupations for which they are suited.

"I have asked the administrator of veterans affairs and the director of the Bureau of the Budget to study this situation thoroughly and to recommend to me any corrective measures."

Abuses Known

VA's investigators are known to have collected, as evidences of abuse of the education program, scores of trade school advertisements inviting veterans to "study at Uncle Sam's expense."

Some officials also have expressed particular concern at the schools that have sprung up to teach such occupations as bricklaying and meatcutting, traditionally learned through apprenticeship.

They point out that the unions in such highly-organized industries do not recognize "graduates" of these schools. The customary apprenticeship periods still are required.

Veterans enrollment in colleges and universities under the GI bill has declined from the 1,158,000 peak in the fall of 1947 to 738,000 Nov. 1, 1949.

Trade Numbers Upped

Trade and vocational school enrollment, however, increased from 591,000 Nov. 1, 1947, to 808,000 two years later.

By comparison, the disabled veterans training program, administered wholly by the Veterans administration, has declined from a peak enrollment of 42,000 March 1, 1947, to approximately 31,000.

In that program, VA places the veteran in school, gives him tests to determine his aptitude, surveys and the chances of ultimate employmnt, and in other ways acts to assure that the disabled veteran will benefit to he fullest extent possible from his training.

Peace Invoked In Washington Adjutant Case

OLYMPIA —(AP)— A state supreme court order has halted the firing in the months-long battle of the adjutants.

The court-order armistice, invoked by Chief Justice George B. Simpson, will extend until Feb. 3.

Then, under terms of an alternate writ of mandate signed by Judge Simpson, Thurston county Superior Judge Charles T. Wright is to appear and show cause why his order reinstating Brig. Gen. Ensley M. Llewellyn as state adjutant general should not be set aside pending an appeal from the decision.

The order was signed by Judge Simpson at the request of Governor Langlie's attorney, E. W. Anderson.

It was the latest maneuver in a battle which began last spring when Langlie requested Llewellyn to resign and the request was refused.

Llewellyn, who charged the dismissal was politically inspired, went into court, contending the governor was without authority to remove him. Proper procedure, he said, would be for the gvoernor to prefer charges before a duly constituted courts' martial.

Meanwhile, it appeared still another court battle loomed ahead.

Judge Wright said his recent decision was not on the question of who holds legal title to the post, but merely a ruling that Llewellyn has a right to hold the office until the title is settled. That question, it appeared, must be decided in a separate action to determine whether Langlie followed the correct procedure in making the dismissal.

Prague Commies Rule On Burials

PRAGUE, — (AP) —Communist officials ruled today that members of all religious faiths—and those who profess to be without religion—can use Prague's largest burial hall, previously set aside for Roman Catholics.

The official news agency said the ruling was made to abolish "the disgraceful condition" by which only Roman Catholics used the central burial hall on Olsany cemetery, Prague's largest.

"Henceforth," the agency said, "burials of citizens will be arranged regardless of their religion, together with citizens without any religion."

Olsany cemetery has plots reserved of all religious denominations.

The burial hall is now operated by the government since the nationalization of all cemeteries here.

The hall was not a consecrated chapel where religious services were held. Parents, relatives, and friends of the deceased usually gathered there before the actual burial was held.
