An ex-Yale professor is experimenting with 3 young apes in the San Diego Zoo. The prof. is trying to teach the apes to talk, and he's as confident as a fireguard in a bath tub. Maybe this is a good idea... but we don't know. If the apes learn to talk, perhaps other animals will, too... and what'll happen to humans? We don't want the family dog correcting our grammar when he tells him to "Lay down!" And we'd hate to have the family cat asking for a little catnip on its liver. If the apes talk, we may even have some big baboon running for office some day. Do you have to do it, professor?

If you're interested in saving money, and who isn't these days, see our advertisement on page 6 of today's paper. It's a good deal!

A Chicago man sued for divorce and said his wife was married to a television set. She wouldn't leave it alone. Who says there's nothing new under the sun? You'll know there's something new when you see the 1950 Plymouth—newest in styling and performance on the road. Drive in to CORKRUH MOTORS, INC., 114 N. Rose St., Phone 308.

LONGHAIR BACKGROUND: Claude Thornhill, whose orchestra is heard every Wednesday night at 8:30 on "Claude Thornhill presents Win a Holiday" over KRRR, received his basic training in music at Cincinnati's Conservatory of Music and the Curtis Institute.

From there, he went into the practical field as pianist and arranger. He worked for such musical greats as Bing Crosby, Benny Goodman, Charlie Spivak, and the late Glenn Miller. The Thornhill orchestra has three trumpets, two trombones, five men doubling on sax and clarinet and a French horn which he introduced to the dance-orchestra world. As a group, the Thornhill organization abounds in team spirit, studiously avoids the star system—even to its leader's piano. "I'm no soloist either," says Claude. "I just play the lute around the gingerbread." The show presents an opportunity to spend a weekend in New York City... all for free. Just listen carefully while Claude Thornhill plays an original tune—then name it (tonight, 8:30-8:45 p. m.).
