Blame Divided In Potato Program

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14 — (A) —
Everybody except the farmer, says
Rep. Horan (R-Wash.), can be blamed for "the high cost and maiadministration of the federal price support program for potatoes."

"Why." he said today, "the potato growers have done everything the government asked, and more."

"If you want scapegoats." he told a reporter, "there are plenty.

the rising costs of every part of the marketing process.

"Blame the folks who refused to add observance of soil conservation practices as a requirement for price support qualification."

"But." he concluded, "don't blame the farmers."

Bi-Partisan Policy Called 'A Dying Thing' By Malone

"Why." he said today, "the potato growers have done everything the government asked, and more."
"If you want scapegoats," he told a reporter, "there are plenty. Blame science for ridding potations of insects and roting, for fertilizers which resulted in fabulous yields per acre.
"Blame the reciprocal trade program, through which 12,500,000 bushels from Canada are added to our domestic supply.

"Blame the department of agriculture for derying a full year before reducing supports after the growers suggested it.
